......A portrait of Sarah Barnhardt as she appears in the second act of "Frou-Frou," by the Viennese painter, Mackart, is to be put in the Paris Salon.

.....The total population of Paris is now 2,225,000, against 1,988,800 in 1876 and 1,851,792 in 1872. The increase is greatest in outlying industrial quarters.

.....Rutherford B. Hayes helped to give Gambrinus a black eye at the recent town election in Fremont, Ohio, where he lives. The temperance ticket was elected.

.....Returns from India state that the number of persons killed there by wild beasts and snakes has increased from 19,279 in 1876 to 21,900 in 1880. In Bengal alone, during the latter year, 359 persons were killed by tigers.

....Prince Bismarck has given great satisfaction in Holland by his acceptance of the invitation to attend the international conference which will discuss the measures for preventing the traffic in girls.

....Mr. Marshall P. Wilder, the horticulturist, says that he found, on visiting the famous vine yard of Johannisburg, that the wine made from grapes grown on the top of the hill brought $10 a bottle, that on the side, half way down, $5 and that at the bottom only two francs.

....Charles Langheimer, the incorrigible old convict whom Dickens saw in the eastern state penitentiary, Philadelphia, and by whom the novelist used to illustrate the horrors of solitary confinement, is about to be released from his ninth term in that prison.

.....Thomas Hughes left a jolly company at his Rugby colony in Tennessee, but now only ten persons remain in the village. A recent visitor says that the hotel and all the dwellings of consequence are tenantless. It is said that Cincinnati people may make the place a summer resort.

......There are five members of the United States senate of foreign birth, viz: Charles W. Jones of Florida, born in Ireland; James B. Beck of Kentucky, born in Scotland; John P. Jones of Nevada, born in England; James G. Fair of Nevada, born in Ireland; William J. Sewell of New Jersey, born in Ireland.

......A young lady in the upper part of the city who has only one party dress, a blue one, and yet who wishes to have it understood that she is well fitted for society, whenever she is at a gathering says, "I really didn't know this evening, what dress to wear, whether my new one, blue one, or the one I wore last.

......Lord Rosebery is at the top of the wave. Lansdowne house, his present London residence, is the scene of a succession of festivities, and when he wishes for change he has Durdans, his delightful racing box at Epsom; Mentmore, his wife's magnificent home in Buckinghamshire, and his own charming seat, Dalmeny, near Edinburgh. He now has an heir a few weeks old.

.....The heir to the dukedom of Wellington was very quietly married last month at the house of his brother-in-law, Col. Owen Williams, M.P. The future duchess comes of a very fast lot. Her sisters are the notorious Lady Aylesford (who could not get a divorce, on account of collusion for that end with her husband), Lady Charles Ker, and Lady Dangan, wife of the eldest son of Earl Cowley, who also is a Wellesley.

.....A new office has been opened in the Pennsylvania railroad station in Philadelphia. On it is the sign, "bureau of information," and at the open window stands a bland man, ready to answer all manner of questions about travel on the Pennsylvania and connecting lines. Whenever he gets stuck by a hard query he uses the telephone or telegraph to get the right reply. This is intended to relieve the other employes and accommodate the passengers.

.....James Brackmann came very suddenly to the conclusion that he wanted a wife. He is a Colorado mine owner, but was staying at the Planters' hotel, St. Louis, when he fell into this frame of mind. Starting out from his room, the first woman he saw was a tidy chambermaid. He popped the question to her instantly. She as bluntly declined; but, on learning that he was rich and in earnest, changed her answer to yes. The wedding was held next day.

......When the prime minister or Sir Stafford Northcote and Lady Northcote visit Windsor Castle, they do not, as a few people suppose, pass the time in talking politics with the queen. "As a matter of fact," says the Saturday Review, "they never see her majesty except during dinner, and in the grand corridor for a short time before and after the meal. A visitor never has a private interview with the queen unless at a formal audience, which is notified in the Court Circular.

....The London Vanity Fair makes General Schenck, the author of the present English mania for poker playing in private life. But General Schenck, in amiably writing out the rules of the game at the request of Lady Waldegrave, had no idea nor did that lady have any, that poker playing would become the after dinner rage of English society, that a youth just of age would lose five times more than his yearly income, or that one diner-out could make $10,000 last year.

......The bridegroom of an Indiana wedding lost his marriage license, without which the minister could not legally make him a husband, and the ceremony was postponed four hours to enable him to procure a duplicate. In his agitation he left this one on the county clerk's desk, and hurried back without it. The wedding guests could wait no longer, as it was then midnight, and thay were about to depart, leaving the bride in tears, when a mud-spattered messenger arrived on horse-back with the important document.

....A lad named Gibbons, aged 17, the son of Lord Ardilaun's gamekeeper, had his skull fractured by three men near Clonbur (close to where Lord Mountmorres was killed) lately. His mother was also wounded badly, and left in precarious plight. Several persons looked on while the boy was murdered. His offence was being son of a faithful servant to Lord Ardilaun (Sir Arthur Guinness), who is about the most liberal and improving resident landlord in the country, and has spent thousands in benefactions to Ireland.

YOUNG MR. VANDERBILT'S WINDOWS

Full Justice to be Done to Anne Boleyn—A Millionaire's Palace.

(From the London Truth).

William K. Vanderbilt has summoned by cable M. Oudinot, the famous painter on glass, to New York to mount and put up the seventeen windows which he designed and colored for that millionaire's grand dining-room. The ladies of the Vanderbilt family chose the subjects which M. Oudinot has painted. One sees from their choice that Zola has not yet elbowed G. P. R. James out of his place in the American book market. Sixteen of the windows are of uniform size; the largest, which will fill an entire end of the banquetting room, is twenty-one feet high, and gives a pictorial representation of the meeting of Francis I. and Henry VIII. on the field of the Cloth of Gold. It is divided by five broad horizontal and four vertical sashes. Nevertheless, the figures do not appear "cut up." Henry is on a powerful white horse and is seen full face. Francis is given in profile. The subject is a festive one, and as Mrs. Wm. K. Vanderbilt said, "calculated to inspire ideas of lofty courtesy, royal dignity, magnificent hospitality and chivalrous sociability."

M. Oudinot, who thus revives in New York a pageant in which two merry Monarches of the Renaissance were actors, was the favorite pupil of Delacroix, and caught some of the magical glamour of his style. There are in all 133 figures in the big window. They are massed so as not to perplex the eye, and are attired as only French costumers know how to dress actors who have to play in grand spectacular dramas. Each king has a following of knights, squires, pursuivants, lance, spear, and battle-axe men-at-arms, falconers, bowmen, chippers-in, jesters, and amusing dwarfs. There are dogs for the field sports of their majestics, and splendid creatures they are.

When the Tudors came to the front in English history the last of the barons was in the tomb. Henry VII. decimated what remained of the feudal nobility, so that Mrs. Vanderbilt will not have the gratification of seeing on the British side of the painted window, peers of ancient lineage. But they took so lordly that nobody would suspect they were upstarts.

The ladies who grace the pageant of the field of the cloth of gold are Queen Claude and her attendant, Anne Boleyn. Claude is sandy-haired, and has a complexion to match. She was a prosaic woman, and had not a soul above jam, which she was skilled in making. The apanages she inherited made the French crown the richest one in Europe, and Francis drew her rents and spent them merrily, and often magnificently. Claude gave her name to a greengage plum. I have seen at Blois an old preserving pan, with her crown and cipher on it. Marguerite's capacity to tell those queer stories, "Les Contes de la Reine de Navarre," is not shown enough in her face. She is handsome and is sure to be admired in New York. To Anne Boleyn, according to the wish of Mrs. Vanderbilt, "the fullest justice" is done. Mrs. Vanderbilt rejects Froude's "tar washed account" of that ill-starred queen, and esteems her perfectly lovely, and of course of angelic innocence. I rather sympathize with Anne, but the theory that she was a snowflakes is not to be seriously upheld. She was formed by the authoress of the queer "Contes," and took kindly to the French civilization of her time. Nevertheless she was too good for Henry.

To get hold of her physiognomy, M. Oudinot ransacked public libraries and private collections of pictures. He ended by following a description of her by Michelet, and a portrait in the Aumale gallery, taken in the halcyon days of her reign. He is not certain that she was beautiful, though well established that she was charming. M. Oudinot gives her the benefit of the doubt, and paints her with a small close coif, a fair English complexion, and a happy looking face, ready to break out into smiles. According to Michelet, she was at the field of the cloth of gold, and was noticed by Henry VIII. Mrs. Vanderbilt, whose tastes are elevated and artistocratic, desired to have the other sixteen windows decorated with the armorial bearings of eight French and eight English lords who were in the trains of Francis and Henry.

THE INTERNATIONAL THROAT AND LUNG INSTITUTE, 75 Yonge street, corner of King, Toronto. A body of French and English physicians are in charge. Great reformation in medical science. The spirometer, the wonderful invention of Dr. M. Souvieille of Montreal, and ex-aide surgeon of the French army, which conveys medical properties direct to the seat of the disease, has been proved in the leading hospitals of Europe to be indispensable for the cure of catarrh, catarrhal deafness, bronchitis, asthma and lung disease. Dr. Souvielle and a body of English and French surgeons and physicians are in charge of this most scientific institution on this continent. We wish country practitioners who have not had sufficient practice to distinguish the different forms of lung disease to bring their patients to our institute, and we will give them free advice. This institute has been organized by this body of scientific men to place Canada in a position to compete on scientific views with any part of Europe, and to protect the people from the hands of insignificant men. Dr. Souviell's spirometer and its preparations, were invented after long and careful experiments in chemical analysis and used in hundreds of cases to prove its effects. He has the sole right in France, England, the United States and Canada. Last year over 1000 letters of thanks were received from all parts of Europe, Canada and America for the wonderful cures performed by the Spirometer. Hundreds of the leading people of this country given as references. Write or call at the International Throat and Lung Institute, 75 Yonge street, corner of King, Toronto, and you will be received by either of the surgeons. Consultations free to physicians and sufferers. Call or write, inclosing stamp for pamphlet giving full particulars free. 136
