The valedictory address from the graduating class was delivered by Dr. E. R. Secord, and was replied to on behalf of the Faculty by Dr. Burgess.

The Dean, Dr. Craik, then delivered the following sessional address:—

"The Convocation of to-day brings to a close the sixty-eighth working session of the Medical Faculty of McGill University. The calendar calls it the sixty-seventh, from some miscount of a former editor, and the error has not as yet been eliminated. The Faculty came to life in 1829, when its first session began with thirty students, and with the exception of the three years of the Canadian Rebellion, from 1836 to 1839, during which period no sessions were held, its yearly sessions have been continued without interruption, the session of 1839-40 opening with twenty-eight students. Of these sixty-eight sessions, it has been my good fortune to be more or less actively connected with no fewer than fifty. Fifty years ago the total number of students of all kinds in the Faculty was fifty-three, this year the total number was 478, or rather more than nine times as many, and thirty-one more than last year, when the number was 447. Of the 478 names on the register this year, 457 were those of undergraduates proceeding to the degree; the other twenty-one being graduates and partial students pursuing some special course of study.

"The 457 undergraduates have come to us from all parts of North America in about the same proportions as of late years, except that the proportion from Ontario is slightly increased, and that from the United States considerably so. The number from the United States this year was fifty-two, or 11½ per cent. of the whole, while last year the number was only thirty-eight, a percentage of 8½. From the two provinces of
