

SONGS IN EXILE.

An Australian contemporary has recently published...

Great Albion! here, at midnight hour, Surrounded by thy guns,

Although it is our lot to range The earth's wide surface o'er,

Place us beneath your burning sky, On Africa's arid shore,

Let beef be tough, and biscuit dry, And milkless tea outpour,

Though short our day, and quenched our light Before that day be o'er,

Let sharks and dolphins shun the hook, Baited from purse's store,

Though Neptune come with tar and soap Our heeded chins to score,

Although the whitening surge beat high, And loud the tempest roar,

Although the Cape no hope may bring, Our tone we will not lower,

And when we tread Van Dieman's strand, Transported to that shore,

Fortune-telling.—At Birmingham, a gipsy named Selina Clayton,
