

- The provisions on nematodes have been included but they are limited in scope, being mostly about processing technology that kills the nematode before presentation to the consumer.

- In summary, there will not be very many fundamental changes.

QUESTIONS:

R. Bulmer - What if directives don't become adopted by 1992, yet the "one Europe" exists?

Reply by P. Toerring - The current practices of member states accepting legal products of other states will be further strengthened. This is an incremental process, as needs will be different, but individual countries will move to regularize their requirements.
