Thomas Jones was in the chair. "If economy means that your boy and my boy, if he comes home from the war ith his hands or feet off, is subjected the cold charity of the city, I say conomy be damned, and with regard the present condition of the alien in ar midst, I am not in sympathy. We is in abnormal times at present, but I sleve that the government has erred not insisting upon an equal wage with be boys at the front, and there should no profiteering, while my boy sheds blood for $1.10 a day," said the eaker, who proceeded to point out that person in this twentieth century hould come before the public with anying else than public ownership. "I and for taking over and linking up the etropolitan Railway with the Toronto freet Railway in the interests of the tizens," The abattoir should also be properly penny wise and pound foolish type, and

"The abattoir should also be properly managed, and it pays to get good and the municipal employ. The material prosperity of the city should the chief care of your representative and I claim that Toronto is the best city to the continent of America, and we hould try to have practical and not sionary legislation in the city council, have been a clitzen for the past 35 cars and have been connected with very good work for the benefit of the ty during that period. If elected I all stand four-square and no influence all make me do otherwise than I have no in the past," said Mr. Phinnemore conclusion.

done in the past, said Mr. Philinemore it conclusion.

Albert Plenty said he had been a resident of the ward for 11 years, and companied of the papers issuing states with regard to the candidates. He took exception to this because of the fact that some of the candidates, himself included had not previously been before the electors. It was not a square deal to the electors. One paper made a Catholic and a Protestant state, and this was raising the bigotry cry. Regarding conomy; the speaker said it was not always desirable to have a cheap city. "I believe in true economy with efficiency," he said. One way in which the city could secure revenue was by ciency," he said. One way in which the city could secure revenue was by doubling the tracks in North Toronto and taxing colleges which had sold lands at increased values. He was a believer in single tax and strongly favored public ownership. He said there should be a referendum in connection with the sale of the abattoir. There should be more public conveniences and a better housing system. He favored the promotion of civile employes.

ight it tooth and nail."

Mr. Blackburn's Work.

Glifford E. Blackburn, who was well received, said that he had considerable municipal experience, altho never a member of the city council. He pointed out the work which he had performed during his long residence in the ward. He was interested with J. R. MacNicol in the express campaign fight and was also prominent in blocking the scheme to place an incinerator plant in the residential section of the ward. He also took a hand in introducing oleomargarine and in the bitulithic payement scheme for Davenport road. He strongly supported the taking over of the Toronto Street Railway in 1921 and said it should have been expropriated three years ago. He evowed himself a supporter of Sir Adam Beck and believed in the commission form of government. He concluded with the statement that he believed in economy with efficiency.

L. L. Jarvis said his platiform was to give attention to reasonable requests, the taking over of the Toronto Street Railway and attention to street and other improvements. He said public ownership was the only thing to fight for and that public ownership would be better controlled by the hydro railway commission. Better assessments and more equitable adjustments, together with more careful management of the water system, were some of the reforms advocated by Mr. Jarvis.

Could Save Seven Millon.

J. J. Hubbard pointed out regarding food control that the farmer set a price to suit himself on the city market, and claimed that if elected he could save $1.000,000 a year to the citizens of Toronto. "I do not care whether I am elected or not," he said, "the newspapers can pick all the slates they like, but I am here before you to help fight the big interests." If 300 farmers could dictate to the City of Toronto it was time for a change. Regarding the coal situation he advised the people not to shout about it, but to go, down to the city counciland demand that the situation be remedied.

Regarding the taking over of the Toronto Street Railway the candidate asked what good it would be to the citizenand what they were going to do with it when taken over. He said the city council should give the taxpayers something for their money.

He fought for straightforward waterworks financing, and stated emphatically that the council was not adopting honest financing in the matter. "I don't mind making a fight and don't mind hosing out in the interests of the people," said the speaker. He also mentaged that he was told to take a t.p. telet the water question alone.
