Germans Claim Repulse of Attack on Both Wings of Sector

Berlin, Nov. 15, via London.—Special despatches received here from the Ancre front described the British gain at Beaumont-Hamel and St. Pierre Division as unimportant.

WAR SUMMARY THE DAY'S EVENTS REVIEWED

Battle created by the advance, is subjected to two fires, a frontal and a cross fire against which experience of the war has proved that it is impossible to stand, if the salient attacked be not too large.

The Germans launched strong attacks against French positions on both banks of the Somme yesterday, but their efforts were failures, for they were unable to regain any strategic points of vantage.

The Germans were forced to attack the French because the establishment of this ally in Sully-Salisles, a part of the Somme, is a great danger to the security of the German batteries behind Mount St. Quentin...

In the Dobruja the Rumanians have taken Basoia, on the Danube, nine miles north of Cernavoda. This success represents an advance of nine or ten miles.

The action of German aviators in flying low over Rumanian villages and firing on the civil population with machine guns is a sample of what would be done to Canada by these gentry if it were in their power to do it.

BRITAIN TAKES UP SUBMARINE MENACE

PROBLEM OF FOOD GROWING PROBLEM

British Preventive Measures "Singularity Successful" But Difficulties Increase

BERESFORD COMPLAINS

Marquis of Crewe Anxious Critics in House of Lords

London, Nov. 15.—The matter of the destruction of British shipping by German submarines came up in the House of Lords this afternoon.

Engineering Pool. Mr. Runciman also referred to the constant difficulty and anxiety of satisfying in this respect the conflicting interests of the navy and the merchant services, especially considering the fact that Great Britain was called upon to provide not only for its own needs, but those of her allies.

He saw no reason why at the end of the year the net production of shipping for the preceding six months should not approach 50,000 tons.

Announcing that he was making arrangements for a pooling of engineering effort on the Tyne and elsewhere, Mr. Runciman said the government must "make the plunge" in this matter for the provision of more merchant ships was urgent.

Ban on Candy. Announcing the intention of the government to prevent growers from making undue profits on the sale of potatoes, he said the question of food was under consideration and in this connection he mentioned elaborate and costly confectionery concerning which a committee of the Royal Society has been advising the board of trade.

The retail price of foodstuffs compared with a year ago have increased on an average of 27 per cent, says the report of the board of trade. He has increased the price of sugar before the war. The prices of sugar, eggs, fish and potatoes, however, are more than double the pre-war prices.

Dealing with the delay owing to the shortage of labor at French ports and congestion, Mr. Runciman suggested bringing labor from other parts of the world to relieve this congestion.

On the question of the shipping output he explained that the British yards were not working up to their maximum production. He said that the output must be increased if Great Britain was to hold her own, adding: "If our yards had remained in full activity we could have produced 2,000,000 tons yearly, while our total losses during the war have been only two and one-quarter million. I see no reason why in the next six months we should not turn out nearly half a million tons."

May Be Potato Tickers. With respect to the possibility of the government taking measures to limit food consumption, he said it was imperative to curtail the luxurious use of sugar, especially with regard to confectionery. The excessive consumption of potatoes, he declared, should be stopped. Potatoes must not be used for feeding animals, and the consumption of potatoes must be voluntarily reduced to potato tickets might be necessary. The government would like steps to be taken to restrict the use of sugar, especially with regard to confectionery. The excessive consumption of potatoes, he declared, should be stopped. Potatoes must not be used for feeding animals, and the consumption of potatoes must be voluntarily reduced to potato tickets might be necessary.

Pure white flour from which the best qualities are extracted, would not be allowed to be milled in the future, and steps would be taken for the control of imported flour and also for the sale and distribution of other articles of food in order to prevent hoarding. If it becomes necessary food tickets would be introduced.

Milk Regulation. Instancing milk as one of the articles, the price of which might be controlled by contract, Mr. Runciman reminded them that it was only possible to fix the prices of articles controlled by the state, and that attempts to control other articles might prevent their coming into the country. The government had been driven to ask for these powers against its will, but they were only a temporary expedient.

The London morning papers devote their leading editorials to Mr. Runciman's statement in the House of Commons. They recognize the seriousness of the situation and concurred in the necessity of the proposed measures, which some of them regret were not adopted earlier.

Fire Chief Corbett and four of my men telephoned for the pressure before we got it," he said to the effect that the pressure was not first to have made short work of the fire.

People who were on the spot at the time the fire broke out, he said, were not in the best of health. The fire chief's statement as to the time before the requested pressure was given.

Mr. Randall of the works department, contradicted the statement that his department had been lax in its attention to duty. He stated that there was the usual fire pressure when the fire apparatus was attached, and that the pressure was raised 50 pounds every time application was made for more water. He said that the length of hose required was responsible for the high pressure being more effective, but that was not the case.

Will Investigate. Alderman Ramsden, who is a member of the works committee, was present at the meeting. He said that his statement coincided with that of the fire chief. He promised to investigate the matter in connection with the case of the boiler, owing to the fact that there were many factories east of Jarvis street, the high pressure system should be extended. The loss is covered by insurance.
