Lieut. Farrell Accuses Hinton of Promulgating a False Statement-Never Offered to Kill Himself to Help the Others - Bystanders Intervene to Prevent Further Trouble-Airmen to Stop Off Only at Toronto -Trip From Moose Factory Described.

BY F. J. LENDRUM, (Staff Correspondent of the Associated Press and Canadan Press, Ltd., Copyright, 1921.)

Mattice, Ont., Jan. 11.-A sharp bassage-at-arms between Lieutenants Stephen Farrell and Walter Hinton arked the end of the American balloonists' trip from Moose Factory to-day. The officers, with their companon, Lieut. A. L. Kloor, jr., arrived here about two o'clock this afternoon on the best of terms. An hour later Farrell had struck Hinton and had sent hin crashing over a table in the home of Bay size here, and altho no further lows were struck, the men are tonight

The trouble arose over information garding an alleged suggestion that he be sacrificed to aid the others which Farrell is credited with having made by Hinton in a letter which the latter wrote and which was published in New York. Hinton admitted authorship of the letter, but claimed in Farrell's presence the statement had been "greatly exaggerated in publication." Later, when Farrell had gone out, the other man declared he had said this only to pacify his companion, and when the other returned, more words passed be-

Finally Farrell sent out a right up-per-cut which caught Hinton on the The latter staggered and fell over a table, throwing up his hands. Farrell had his lest ready to follow up his first assault, but Hinton would not fight. Arthur Stevens, president of the Cochrane board of trade, who had come here to welcome the airmen to the north country, and the newspapermen present intervened between the pugilistic officers and the scene was closed. The men separated and left separately for the special train on the siding at the Lieutenant Farrell was a short disance behind his fellows in coming up the Missanabie trail, and while they were at the railway station, he went into Williamson's house. Here he was relating his experiences of the trip to newspapermen when Lieutenant Hin-ton arrived in the midst of his narrative. Lieutenant Hinton told Farrell he should not talk further because of a message Hinton had received from the secretary of war forbidding the officers to say anything until an official report had been filed. "You rat, you have been doing some talking yourself," said Farrell, who then accused Hinton of writing false eports about him, with particular reference to an alleged offer by him that he would suicide to save the others. Hinton claimed the letter had been published without his consent. This conversation took place in the the turbulence with which some of parlor of the log dwelling and Farrell went into another room to make an apology, he said, to Mrs. Williamson, (Continued on Page 3, Column 2.)
