STRUCK BY LIGHTNING:—On Tuesday of last week the dwelling of Mr. Geo. Taylor, Lower Napan, was struck by lightning. The bolt entered under the floor of the kitchen bursting some of the boards upward and splitting them. Mrs. Taylor was sitting within a foot of the spot with a babe in her arms, and received a shock. The babe however was uninjured. Mrs. Taylor soon recovered and is now as well as ever. The lightning also entered by way of the chimney and broke window casings and some of the other woodwork. Fortunately no fire followed the visitation.

An Artistic Turn-Out.

Referring to the Dominion Day turn-out in Moncton, the Transcript says:—

"Among the prettier decorated carts were those of Jas Flanagan, H G Marr, L Higgins & Co, Mrs J J McDonald, Sumner Co, Peter McSweeney Co, and I C R woodworkers.

"The popular verdict was in favor of Mr Flanagan's display as being the most artistically decorated cart in the procession. The design was very pretty, representing the peace proclamation, and the decorations were of an elaborate character. The car was drawn by four grey horses wearing blankets of crimson and gold and bearing Mr Flanagan's name. Miss Claire Flanagan was seated on the car and represented a fairy driving a pair of swans, drawing an inverted cannon. The dominant colors were crimson and gold, a relief from the prevailing colors in the procession. Pictures of King Edward VII adorned each side of the car and over all rested a large gold crown on velvet cushions.

Base Ball.

The Chatham Stars and the St. John Franklins played a base ball match on the Agricultural Exhibition Association's grounds, Chatham, on Dominion Day. The players and their positions were as follows:

Franklins.		Stars.
J. Cressman,	c.	W. Skidd,
F. George,	p.	W. Walsh,
W. Carson,	1 b.	Geo. Sutton,
A McGuiggan,	2 b.	Joe Pine,
D. Canboy,	3 b.	Phil. Barry,
H. Atchieson,	s. s.	Ed. Foley,
W. Harris,	l. f.	D. Cassidy,
J. Sugrue,	c. f.	T. Lynch,
F. Sweeney,	r. f.	J. Miller,
H. Howe, spare man.

The game was umpired by John Skidd.

The play was very good on both sides. The individual honors of the afternoon were with Ed. Foley, who made two magnificent single-hand catches of balls, which were apparently beyond reach.

After the Franklins had finished their last inning and the Stars had one man out in their last, the score was a tie. Then the Franklins made a "kick" over an alleged foul ball which the umpire allowed, and they left the field, thus preventing a fair finish. The game was awarded to the Stars.

An Excellent Illustrated Paper.

Messrs. Anslow Bros., of Newcastle, are to be congratulated on the production of a handsome illustrated souvenir edition of their enterprising weekly — The Union Advocate—the longest established paper on the North Shore of New Brunswick. This edition contains much valuable information in reference to the Miramichi, and the North Shore generally, including historical articles, papers on our fish and game resources, sketches of camp life, etc. There are three of Mr. Hedley V. Parker's immitable productions: "Dungarvon's Contingent is Ready" and the "The Days of Duffy Gillis," which originally appeared in the ADVANCE, and "The Man behind the Boathook," now given to the public for the first time; also Mr. D. G. Smith's article (illustrated) on "The Salmon Leap," which appeared last March in "Forest and Stream." The illustrations are all excellent half tones and include views of local buildings, rivers, angling and hunting scenes. The whole is enclosed in a handsome cover of original and striking design showing a bull moose on his "last run," just tottering to his fall from a rifle shot. The price of the souvenir number is only ten cents. It may be ordered from Messrs. Anslow Bros. or Mr. Ed. Johnson, Chatham. It ought to have a very wide circulation.

Death of Mr. Dean Sage.

Dean Sage of Albany, the founder of the Harmony Club, whose headquarters are at the mouth of the Upsalquitch on the Restigouche would, no doubt, if he were alive, enjoy having clerical honors conferred on him, as they were last week by the Times and Transcript, of Moncton, both of which represented his death as the "carrying off" of a clergyman. Mr. Sage was a regular business man—a capitalist—and, in his spare time, wrote books and went fishing. His best literary work was on subjects connected with fish and game, for he was an ardent angler and sportsman and was at his best when by the river or in the forest, in company with friends of tastes similar to his own. His death took place on Tuesday afternoon last. That morning he appeared to be in his usual good health. He went out on the river with his canoemen and killed three salmon in the forenoon. After lunch he went out again and spent three hours on the river, when he was seized with a severe pain in the region of the heart, which, in spite of all that could be done for him with the means at hand, grew rapidly worse and ended in death in a very short time. The remains were taken by way of the river to Metapedia and thence by rail to New York, leaving on Tuesday night by a special train.

The Care of the Feet

McCosh, Church Point, and Miss Miller, Douglastown, who contributed to the musical part of the programme, the young people of the congregation were able to give what has been pronounced one of the best socials ever held in Tabusintac. Obituary.

The sudden death on Sunday morning, June 15th, of Mrs. Joseph LaPointe, of Belledune, was a great shock to her relatives and many friends. Mrs. Lapointe, who was a daughter of Mr. John Culligan of Belledune, had a host of friends, who will learn with deep regret of her sudden and early death. She was hardly a year married and leaves an infant daughter—a circumstance which makes her death still more sad. To her young husband so sadly bereft, to her aged father and mother, her sisters, brothers and other relatives, the sympathy of the whole community is extended.

The funeral took place on Tuesday, the 17th, and was one of the largest seen in these parts. Requiem High Mass was celebrated at the Parish church of Belledune, by the Rev. Pastor Father Van de Mortel. Father Purcell, of Jacquet River, who was in the Sanctuary during the mass, delivered the funeral sermon, during which he referred to his acquaintance with the deceased and her many good qualities. He also made feeling reference to the sad circumstance of her sudden demise, and exhorted those present to be always prepared for death, for like the deceased, they, too, were liable to be suddenly called away.

The Pastor, Father Van de Mortel, before the "Libera" at which he officiated, assisted by the Pastor of Jacquet River, also spoke and made kindly references to the deceased. He spoke of his long acquaintance with her and her many good traits of character. The service at the church concluded, the body was then borne to the cemetery, where amidst the tears of sorrowing relatives and friends it was consigned to its last resting place, the last sad rites being here performed by Father Purcell. The pall bearers were Stanley Culligan, Thomas LaPointe, John McGovern, Dennis Culligan, Chas. McGregor, John McDonald.

Daniel Astle, of Indiantown, Miramichi, has received intelligence from Laconia, N. H., of his son Clifford's death by drowning in the Connecticut river. Deceased was twenty-eight years of age and unmarried.

The casualties department, Capetown, reports the death from enteric fever at Standerton, June 24, of Warren Craig of Newcastle, N. B. He was a son of Mr. Samuel Craig and a member of the S. A. constabulary.

S.S. Alexandra.

The Miramichi Steam Navigation Company's new steamer, Alexandra, had a trial run on Monday afternoon. There were on board, when she started from Chatham, quite a number of the stockholders of the company and a few members of their families. Going up as far as the Bushville wharf, His Honor Judge Wilkinson, Mrs. W. J. Wilkinson and Miss Cutler were taken on board and the boat turned about and headed down river. Governor Snowball was on board going up to Bushville and back to Chatham, landing however, at the latter place on the way down. During the run down river from Chatham, the different parts of the new "flyer" were visited by those on board, her steaming capacity and revolutions of propeller gauged, and time of running between well known points observed. As the machinery was new, it was not, of course, run to its full capacity for the tooled surfaces of the shaft, crank-pins, etc., had not been worn sufficiently smooth to prevent heating by friction. With steam, however, at an average of about 95 lbs. and only 20 inches vacuum, giving an average of about 110 propeller revolutions per minute, a speed of 12 miles an hour was maintained. It is intended, when the boat is in regular service, to run at pressure of about 130 lbs., with 120 to 130 propeller revolutions a minute, which will easily give a speed of, at least, thirteen miles an hour.

The Alexandra's general dimensions are:

Length over all	105 ft.
Breadth	24 "
Depth	9 "

The engines are compound with 16 and 30 in. cylinders and 18 in. stroke. The propeller is 7 feet in diameter. The boiler a "Scotch marine," 8 ft. 6 in. diameter and 12 ft. long. It is allowed 125 lbs. of steam pressure.

Messrs. Ruddock of the Miramichi Foundry and Machine Works, who have built the Alexandra under contract, have produced a staunch, substantial, seaworthy and convenient boat of ample capacity to accommodate the freight and passenger traffic of the Steam Navigation Company's down-river route. The cabin, lavatories, dining saloon and other conveniences for the comfort of passengers are excellent and a great improvement on those of the "Miramichi," which, although a good boat, has been found too small for the business she has built up for the company.

The Alexandra is expected to take the Miramichi's place on the down-river route on Monday, and the Miramichi is to take the Nelson's former place on the up-river route.

Death of Mrs. John C. Miller.

The announcement was made on Monday in Chatham, Newcastle and other centres of communication on the Miramichi that Mrs. John C. Miller of Millerton had been prostrated by paralysis and that her life was in danger. The same evening news of her death shocked a large circle of friends, and particulars of the sad event were widely sought, for the Tuesday holiday—Dominion Day—closed the telephone offices in Chatham, Newcastle and elsewhere, as usual, and, in the absence of regular telegraphic communication with Millerton, even news of the funeral arrangements were not easily obtained. The particulars, however, are that Mr. and Mrs. Miller were sitting on the verandah of their home in Millerton on Sunday evening about ten o'clock talking of a summer trip which they proposed to take. Mr. Miller became aware that his wife did not reply to a remark he made and he observed that she was leaning over the side of the arm chair on which she was seated. On his hastening to her side and, clasping her hand, asking if she was ill, he received no reply. Then he said he would go and "call Jack"—their son, Mr. J. W. Miller—who was within call in the house. Although she could not speak, she seemed to understand perfectly what he said and held his hand tightly as if dreading to have him leave her, so he cried out to his son to come to them which he did, and summoned Dr. Wilson, the well known local physician, with all haste. Dr. Wilson, on reaching the patient and making an examination said to the anxious husband and children that the left side was paralysed, and although Mrs. Miller was apparently in a comotose condition she appeared to hear and understand what was said, waving her right arm as if to assure the anxious husband and others that the right side was not affected. She was carried into the house and lay apparently unconscious, breathing regularly, for a time, and then intermittently, until near five o'clock on Monday afternoon, when she died as if quietly falling asleep.

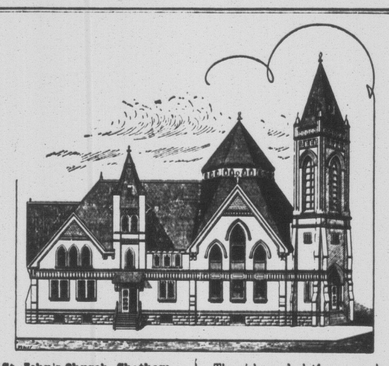
The funeral took place on Wednesday afternoon and was largely attended by representative people of all classes, from the Lieutenant Governor and Mayors of Chatham and Newcastle, to the humblest employees in the different industries along the river.

The house service was conducted by Rev. Mr. McLeod, pastor of Grace church, (Presbyterian) Millerton, assisted by Rev. T. G. Johnstone, its former pastor. The prayer at the grave, in the Methodist church burying ground, Millerton, was by Rev. Wm. Aitken, of St James' Presbyterian church, Newcastle.

The pall-bearers were Lt. Col. Call, James Robinson, M. P., Wm. Carruthers, John Betts, John Graham, Lambert Flett.

The floral tributes were beautiful, the principal being one of gothic design representing "Gates Ajar," from the employees of the Millers Tanning Extract Company; an elaborate crescent from Mrs. James Robinson; a wreath from Mrs. R. R. Call and one from Mr. and Mrs. John W. Miller. There were cut flowers from other friends, the whole showing the esteem in which the deceased lady was held and the general regret over her removal from the large social circle in which she moved.

Mr. and Mrs. Miller were married in 1861 and was sixty-four years old at the time of her death. She is survived by her husband and one son, Mr. J. W. Miller, who have the sympathy of all classes on the Miramichi in their bereavement.



New St. John's Church, Chatham.

The new church of St. John's congregation, Chatham, which has been under construction since about August, 1900, when excavation for the foundation was begun, is to be opened for public worship on Sunday next. The structure is of wood and of unique but handsome design, in which the gothic order predominates. The illustration of its eastern front facade on Cunard street, which we give herewith, will convey a better idea of its general exterior features than any description we might make. The Wellington street facade, although not so long as the eastern, is equally handsome, while a view which takes in this front and the western side with its octagnal corner tower and apse, is even more imposing and pleasing to the eye. Indeed, the church has a massive and handsome appearance from all points of view and is amongst the best of its class in the province. Its general dimensions are:

Length on Cunard Street front,	91	feet.
" " Wellington "	58	"
Height of corner tower	88	"
" " Nave	64	"
" " S. S.	55	"

The basement is excavated to a depth of about five feet under the whole building, and there is a solid masonry wall rising ashlar-faced three feet above the general line of the surface, and on this foundation the structure of the church rests.

As the illustration shows, the angles and corners are buttressed and the walls relieved by an ornamental belt-course, the towers ending in pinnacles and finials.

The main entrance is through a gothic portioned doorway in the base of the main tower, corner of Cunard and Wellington streets. A handsome flight of steps leads up to the massive oaken double doors which open into a spacious vestibule. There is also an entrance in the smaller tower on the west corner fronting Wellington street and one through a doorway in the southern tower on Cunard street leading into the Sunday school section, and still another for the pastor, sunday school superintendent and members of the choir in the western side of the church opposite to the general sunday school entrance. These three minor doorways are all hooded.

The walls and buttresses are covered with sawn shingles which are laid on in three, two or one thicknesses to each course, depending upon the working out of the design They are colored with oil of smoke, the door and window trimmings and the wide belt course being white. This combination of work and coloring gives to the walls a massive effect, with a suggestion of rustic design. The roof, or roofs, are colored in bronze green.

The main portion of the church is octagonal in form 58x58 ft. and its principal roof terminates at a clerestory, which is pierced by thirty-two small gothic windows, and above this is the clerestory roof which is also octagonal, and relieved by pediment windows. There are three sets of large osthedral triplet gothic windows, and a small set of the same design, in the walls of the nave, which, with those of the clerestory, give an ample and soft light in the church.

The interior, in design and finish, more than meets the anticipations suggested by examination of the fine exterior.—Passing into the nave, or auditorium, from the main vestibule, the sight is most pleasing to the eye. The cathedral windows of hammered glass and those of the clerestory—all in soft colors—blend their mellow light on blue-grey tinted walls, above which rises the main roof. This is divided into three hundred and thirty panels formed by diagonally placed wood in its natural colors. The roof covering the clerestory is also of octagonal form, and its richly finished ceiling has, in the centre, a fret-work ventilator of ample capacity to purify the air of the nave, the height of which, at this central point, is nearly fifty feet. Converging from each angle of the octagonal main roof at the bottom of the clerestory are eight light beams which meet in a common centre, and from this point depends a rich electric chandelier of thirty-six lights, while other electric lights are placed in handsome brackets around the walls.

The pulpit and choir platform is in an apse directly opposite to the main entrance. While the portion of this platform which is occupied by the officiating clergymen projects a few feet into the nave beyond the apse, that occupied by the choir and organ is in the apse, which is of the width of one of the octagonal sides of the nave—23 feet—and its triple-columned arch, with enriched capitals, is massively handsome.

The semi-circular front of the platform is richly panelled in polished elm and the platform steps are of the same wood.

Four aisles radiate from the platform up the slightly inclined floor—two at each side forming a continuous passage around the walls, while the other two are central aisles. The seats, which are of polished elm with oak ends and ash backs, are of the finest construction and finish. They form semi-circles corresponding with the front of the pulpit platform. They will accommodate a congregation of four hundred and fifty persons.

The aisles and platform are handsomely carpeted. The carpets were the gifts of the Christian Endeavor Society who were aided by the "Willing Workers."

The wainscoting of the nave extends up the walls four feet from the floor and is of elm, moulded so as to give it a very rich effect.

Provision is made for the addition of a gallery around six of the octagon sides should it ever become necessary, but its absence in no way mars the harmonious and pleasing effect of the interior.

Leading off from the main body of the church, and separated by a moving panelled partition of the full width of one of the octagon sides -23 feet—is the Sunday school room which is 33x55 feet and handsomely finished. It has a spacious assembly room and five class stalls, open in front and having dividing partitions between them which are on the alignment of the church platform, so that when the moving partition is raised those in the Sunday school rooms and those in the church may be addressed from the platform with equal facility. On the west side of the Sunday school room is that of the superintendent, with a movable wooden screen, which, when opened, places him in view of the scholars, so that he may address or direct them.

Next to the superintendent's room is that of the pastor, and there are private doors by which he and also members of the choir may reach their places without passing through the body of the church.

The main entrance to the Sunday school portion of the building is through the Cunard street door, which leads into a vestibule, from which, besides the door of the Sunday school room is one leading to the library and another to an inner vestibule where the mechanisms for operating the electric light and ventilating registers are located.

There are to be two furnaces in the basement—one each for heating the church and Sunday school. Here also will be a kitchen, lavatory and fuel room.

The church was built from designs and specifications of Messrs. Elliott & Hopson, architects, of Halifax. Mr. James Troy, of Newcastle, one of the most thorough master builder of the Province, was the contractor for the whole work, which he has personally superintended from the ground upwards. The structure, throughout, is a credit to his mechanical skill and painstaking faithfulness in executing the work.

The building of this church by St. John's congregation, which is not a very large one, is an illustration of what can be done under the impetus of zeal and enterprise in a good work. Too much cannot be said in praise of the energy, in dustry and self-denial which have characterised all concerned in the undertaking, from the pastor, Rev. J. Morris MacLean, down to the humblest member of the congregation. The committees under which the new church was built were:

Building Committee: Chas. Gunn, chairman; Rev. J. M. MacLean, Secretary; D. P. Walls, Jas. Firth, Walter Crosby, Alex. McKay, Andrew Morrison, A. C. MacLean, Robt. Walls, Wm Luke.

Finance Committee: Alex. McKinnon, chairman; James Miller, Treasurer; Rev. J. M. MacLean, A. C. McLean, Asa Walls, A. G. Dickson, R. H. Anderson, Chas. A. Gunn.

The Dedicatory services on Sunday next will be at 11 a.m. and 3 and 7 p.m. Rev. Clarence MacKinnon, B. D., of Park St. church, Halifax, will preach in the morning and evening, and Rev. W. C. St. John's church congregation was organized in 1831 under the late Rev. John McCurdy, D D., and its first church, corner of Church and St. John streets, was opened in 1832. Its pastors, in regular order, have been as follows:—

Rev. John McCurdy, D. D.,	1831-1868.
Rev A R Garvie,	1868-1870.
Rev. Robt. Wilson,	1871-1872.
Rev. J. M Allen,	1873-1876.
Rev. J. A. F. McBain,	1877-1882.
Rev. N. McKay, D. D.,	1885 1898.
Rev. J. Morris MacLean, B. A.,	1899.

The corner stone of the new church was laid on 4th October, 1900, by Mrs. William Anderson, a daughter of the first pastor. The interesting ceremonies of that day are no doubt, well remembered by many citizens.
