

The Hamilton Times.

SATURDAY, JULY 2, 1898.

ARE THEY OVERWORKED?

In reply to the inquiry of the Times as to when the Canadian child became so delicate that it could not study a while in the evening, the London News says "the fathers and grandfathers of the present generation of school children did not have a lot of facts to master, and were well content if they mastered the art of reading, writing and the simpler forms of arithmetic," and the Toronto News quotes the following statement of a physician of that city, whom it describes as "a university graduate, who is also a clear-headed, sensible medical man": "My 9-year-old boy came home from school the other evening with arithmetic examples to work that took me a solid hour to work out. The little fellow, urged on by his teacher, had worked himself into a state of nervous excitement of the most dangerous nature, so that he would call out in his sleep snatches of difficult arithmetical questions away beyond his years. The home lesson system as it is practised in Toronto is simply child murder."

We cannot, like our old London friend, speak from personal recollection of the curriculum that was set before the grandfathers of the present generation of school children, but coming the lap closer to date, we can affirm with certainty that the fathers of the boys and girls who are now going to school had to study a good many things besides the three R's, long before they got their growth. Some old school books, to which the writer recently referred, show by the scribbles on the inside covers that one boy with whom he was acquainted was translating Caesar before he was eleven years old and Virgil before he was twelve. The boys and girls of the preceding generation used to take a brush at algebra, geometry, botany, physiology and history, and it was regarded as a matter of course that the lessons should be prepared at home. No doubt the pace was too fast for some of the scholars in those days, and there may have been cases, like the one mentioned by the Toronto News, in which a delicate, nervous lad found the assigned task too heavy for him. We did not intend to argue that any child should be overworked. Our idea was that sanitary appliances are so much better now than they were forty years ago: the school houses and dwelling houses are better heated, ventilated and lighted; clothing is better and cheaper; food is more plentiful and of better quality; there are more toys of to-day ought to be bigger, stronger and more capable of hard work than their fathers and grandfathers were at the same age. If there has been deterioration in physical strength and endurance, what is the explanation of it, for improvement might fairly be expected?

"Don" in Saturday Night seems to have been looking at the matter in about the same way as the Times, for he remarks in this week's issue of that paper that "too much is said against the overwork of school children," and he adds:

"We may be taxing the brains of our children too heavily, but the pressure on them later on will be very great, and if they cannot stand the strain it is perhaps better to go according to the doctrine of the survival of the fittest and let them die young. However, as to children dying young from overstudy, I have never known a well authenticated instance. Foolish parents, too eager for their children's progress, may force them to study all around the house, and to application to their studies afterwards, thus leaving them without any time for play, or any mental rest, but I am sure that if the youngsters of this city are seriously suffering from overstudy, there is too much rubbish talked by people who know nothing of education, the methods employed, the work done, and the injury to children minds by over-application. It is invariably the child mind which applies itself to study to such an extent as to injure its constitution, belongs to a nervous and unbalanced physique. If the child does not over-study itself it would overdo itself in some other direction. You never see a great, big, fat, lusty boy study himself to death; his digestion is too good to tolerate any mental overwork. The world seems good enough to him without getting a large percentage of marks at school, and he can pound his companions, outrun them, beat them at ball games, and ransack his mother's cupboard with such impunity that the world of arts and letters amounts to but a little and a distinguished position cuts no figure in his calculations. His mother may send him to bed and steal his clothes, but he will come out of his bedroom the next morning the same rambunctious youth that entered it for punishment the day before."

There must be some standard for school work, as there is for every other kind of work, and as Don says, the standard of the Public School should not be "the capacity of the dull, the indolent, the indurated." Summarized, the whole thing means that the school curriculum is made for the average mind. There are many bright children who might go faster than our school system permits; there are many dull ones who cannot go so fast; but who will claim that the system should be arranged for the dull and the bright ones discouraged? What our school system is supposed to do is to make the best out of the best material. If the best material is separated from the poorest material by examinations, the separation is made early and the choice of attention is made accordingly. There is more harm done in discouraging the bright than there is good done by babying the dull, though of course the methods employed should be to take most care of those who need the most attention."

PRESENT YOUR EVIDENCE OR APOLOGIZE.

On June 25th the Hamilton Herald, in referring to the murder of Policeman Twomey by a tramp in London, said:

Only a day or two before that, some Hamilton policemen were attached and maltreated by a mob while attempting to make an arrest, and yet not a single one of the guilty parties has been called to account, although the parties who were most guilty in connection with the disgraceful affair are known. Criminal and violent persons can hardly be blamed for concluding that in this Province a policeman may safely be treated as an outlaw, whom anyone may attack and maltreat without fear of consequence.

The Times pointed out that these remarks were not justified by the facts; that in the Police Court inquiry it was shown that no policeman was "attacked and maltreated"; that, on the contrary, it was proven that some unfortunate who had been injudicious enough to go to see what was doing and were surrounded against the police were furiously clubbed for jostling the officers, and that the Herald's insinuation that the court permitted policemen to be treated as outlaws was an insult without justification or excuse. Does the Herald withdraw it? Not it. It wriggles, quibbles and prevaricates. It quotes the Times as saying:

Hamilton has not often witnessed a scene like that of Saturday night. It illustrated how quickly a few blows of a policeman's club can awaken in a good-natured crowd the passions that make mobs dangerous. The incident should be thoroughly inquired into.

The Herald says it was not inquired into. The fact is the police laid information against certain persons, presumably those regarded by them as most culpable. The evidence showed that there was no "attack" on, or "maltreatment" of, the police, but that the victims of the clubs were unfortunate enough to be crowded too near the officers with the clubs. Again we say, if the Herald has any evidence to prove attack on or maltreatment of, the police by any person or persons (and it alleges that there was, and that the guilty parties are well known), let it present Magistrate Jelfs with the evidence, and if on proof of the assault proper punishment is not meted out it will find the Times as ready to condemn the Magistrate as it is now ready and able to defend him against the Herald's unjust insinuation.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Four or five hundred United States volunteers have received indubitable evidence that the capture of Cuba is no picnic, and the fellows who told them Spanish could not shoot and were too cowardly to fight did well to stay at home.

The second instalment of preferential tariff came into force to-day. Some of the Tory journals say it is the same old N. P. that is yet operating, that we do not mind admitting, that the rates of duty on imports are still a great deal too high for the good of the country.

A few days ago a well-known Hamilton lady thoughtlessly left some valuable jewelry lying exposed in her room in a hotel (not in Hamilton) in which she was a guest. When she returned to her room the jewelry had disappeared. There's a moral in this. If you must carry expensive jewelry, use it to be sure that when it is not in use it is placed beyond the reach of sneak thieves.

This story is brought by U. S. seamen just returned from Cuba, thus escaping the U. S. censor:

"A Cuban was left to guard three Spanish prisoners who were bound. An officer inquired for the prisoners some time later. The Cuban shrugged his shoulders and said that they were gone. Soldier? How should he know? They found the three bodies in the brush a short distance away, all headless."

In the interest of "humanity," the United States are joining forces with the Cubans to help them in their battles against Spain.

The U. S. Stamp taxes came into force yesterday and paying for the result of jingoism has begun. News was also received that in a skirmish the treasury officials say the Santiago expedition has already cost over $20,000,000 and is likely to cost much more. The level-headed Yankee, thinking it all over, is nearly ready to concede that "glory" of the kind being harvested might better be left on the field, and that if jingos had to have Cuba it would have been cheaper to buy it and pay for it in hard cash.

Speaking of the Galician settlers in the Northwest the Toronto World to-day says: "They are described as dirty, lazy, ignorant, quarrelsome and unprogressive in every way, and, as most of them are absolutely without means, it is feared that the industrious people of our Northwest may have to bear the burden of supporting many of them." It assails the Government for permitting them to become settlers. The Mail and Empire to-day has an article on these same Galicians, and it declares that "they are doing finely, and evidently will prove good citizens." It describes the settlements and their progress and says the people are "happy and content." Both Tory organs had access to the same sources of information.

If those Montreal shirt makers, who are trying to reduce their employees' wages on the pretence that the tariff compels them to do so, get what they deserve, they will lose in trade more than they gain by sweating their employees. The fact is that wages ought to get all the orders. The general condition of the country is such that employment is likely to be plentiful in every line of business for some time to come, and the Montreal squeezers will not be able to retain their hands at starvation wages, while fair wages are to be earned in other lines.

The Chicago tough who runs the Yankee paper in Galt should not let his little temper get the upper hand of his wits. The Times had nothing to do with starting the war, and it is not the fault of the Times that Spain could not be whipped, Cuba taken and the Philippine Islands wiped off the map in the very first round. It does not really mend the situation any to jaw at the Times and to call it nasty names. It is a far cry from the siege of Santiago to the Wentworth Regattah, but the poor fellow whose heart is in Chicago while the rest of his carcass is in Galt may be excused for not being so wise where he is as "this hot weather. His base operations are hardly suitable for the work he is trying to do.

Not one charge of corruption or dishonesty attacking the expenditure yet made by the Laurier Government. -Montreal Transcript.

Surely Bro. Hawkeye must be falling. Or is he so busy with his job-printing that he hasn't time to read? -Ottawa Citizen.

What charge of corruption or dishonesty has ever been put forward by any responsible person? Even the Drummond County Railway bargains for months "petered out" so miserably that the Tory members were fain to vigorously deny that they individually had ever charged that there was anything corrupt or dishonest in connection with it. Isn't the Citizen just playing the part of a cowardly slanderer?

The New York Journal of Commerce, which is developing into quite a link, is disgusted with the stories told by the war correspondents. This is the way it refers to Mr. Richard Harding Davis' story of the killing of "Teddy's Terrors": "It is possible that our dismounted cavalry were imprudently led into a Spanish ambush, but most of the officers and men are accustomed to Indian warfare, and it will take more than the assertion of a young man who wrote war novels, first, and then went to see a war, to establish it." But late reports make the matter no better, for they represent that the fight was so mismanaged that the U. S. troops suffered from the fire of their own men.

Mr. Davies, of Toronto, who issues the campaign literature on the subject of hog-federating, and who shares with the Spectator the dread that our pork trade may suffer from the feeling of duty-free corn (corn that has paid duty is not open to objection), in a recent number points out that Irish bacon is losing its prestige in the British market. That is probably another consequence of the war, removing the duty from corn. Doubtless the expert hog-federator will write the expert link together the cause will be able to effect Canadian bacon owes its constantly growing preference in the British market not to one cause, but to many. Care in breeding, mixed feeding, in which corn is only a part of the diet; expert curing to suit the market; and careful handling.

Wild With Eczema
Hands and Limbs Covered with Blisters and Great Red Blotches.
Scorched Until Almost Wild. Burned Like Fire. Sleep Impossible.
Cuticura Brings Speedy Relief, and a Permanent Cure at a Cost of $2.

I was a sufferer for eight years from that most distressing of all diseases, Eczema. I tried some of the best physicians in the country, but they did me little good. The palms of my hands were covered, and would become inflamed; little white blisters at first would appear, then they would peel off, leaving a red, moist surface which would burn like fire and itch, and as it became worse the burning and itching would begin. Night after night I would be awake all night and scratch and almost blind. I heard of CUTICURA REMEDIES, got a box of CUTICURA (containing a bottle of CUTICURA, a box of CUTICURA Ointment, a bottle of CUTICURA Lotion, and a box of CUTICURA Cream), and after a few applications I noticed the redness and inflammation disappear. Before I had used one box there was not a sign of Eczema left. I can truthfully assert that $2.00 worth of CUTICURA REMEDIES cured me.

J. D. FORTY, 1115 Carson St., Pittsburg, Pa. Having been suffering from Eczema, and every species of itching, burning, and smarting, and skin eruptions, which, when I used CUTICURA, I found it to be a most effective remedy, and I can truthfully assert that $2.00 worth of CUTICURA REMEDIES cured me.

A FAMILY REUNION.

Enjoyable Time at Mr. Robert Shaw's Home in Glanford.

For many years the family of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Shaw, of Glanford, have made it a custom to assemble at the old homestead every Dominion day to celebrate. This year's reunion took place yesterday, when about 60, including children and grandchildren, were present and spent the day in holding races and other games, hearing recitations, songs and music and some speeches. Dinner was enjoyed by the large party and the day passed most harmoniously. Mr. and Mrs. Shaw received many congratulations.
