SIR CHARLES DUFFY'S LET

TER ON THE LAND BILL. In Sir Charles Gavin Duffy important letter on the Iris Land Bill he says:—"For m part, I think the act contains the germs of immeasurable good that it is a boon such as no Pa liament, native or foreign, ever made to the Irish people before that, wisely administered, an wisely amended—for Lord Sa isbury has made amendment in evitable—it will, in the phras of Mr. Disraeli, do by law wha it would otherwise have been necessary to do (Heaven only knows when!) by revelution There is no one now living, un less it be the venerable pasto of Durrow in the South, or Pro fessor Rogers in the North, wh can contest with me the some what melancholy claim of being the survivor of a little band who, in 1859, when the people were flying before the exterminator like a routed army, when dismay and even despair were nearly universal in Ireland, rallied the country, united Ulster and Munster on the same plat form after half a century of alienation, and made the first essential farewell st-p toward whatever has since been accomplished in agrarian reform. Frederick Lucas and James McKnight, George Henry Moore and Patrick McMahon have gone to their account, but their work lives after them, and it was they who sowed the seed that has since ripened to so liberal a harvest." Sir Charles then pro. ceeds to consider the question, from his point of view, "How ought the Irish people to receive this new law, an now can they best use it in the interest of Ireland?" This he regards as the "most pressing and practical of all possible questions" at this moment, and adds: "What we have to do with, of course, is the law as it actually stands. As the bill left the House of Commons it seemed to me it was the completest and indeed the only nearly complete act of justice the Imperial Parliament ever proffered to Ireland. * * * *

The Land Bill was so large and. generous in its connection that, alter the lopping it has undergone at the hands of a selfish oligarchy, an act of Parliament remains which, honestly and fearlessly administered, may do for Ireland what Stein and Hardenburg, did for Prussia,-build it up anew from its ruins,-may indeed, without violence or wrong to anyone, undo and reverse the confiscations of Cromwell and the Williamite Parliaments. The claim of indi-

Irish race to the possession and control of their own soil remains an inextingui hable right, and this right is recognized, it seems to me, in the Land act of 1881.

viduals to confiscated property is dead and gone years ago. but the claim of the long excluded
