Fooled!

(An Australian in Daily Mail.)
The wonderful tropical island of Australia, the largest and most fertile of the world, was first settled by the white man in 1788, when the first fleet of British ships, under the command of Captain James Cook, arrived at the eastern tip of the continent. At that time the land was inhabited by a few aboriginal tribes, but the British found it so fertile and so well suited to their needs that they decided to settle there. They found it so fertile and so well suited to their needs that they decided to settle there. They found it so fertile and so well suited to their needs that they decided to settle there.

ressed—almost annoyed.
"The apprehension entertained in Australia, he solemnly wrote, 'that some foreign Power was about to establish itself on the shores of New Guinea appears to have been altogether indefinite and unfounded, and the inquiries which have been made by her Majesty's Government have given them the strongest reasons for believing that no such step has been contemplated.'"
It is the good old phrase—such steps are never "contemplated." Two years later, at the urgent desire of the Colony, the British Cabinet decided to proclaim a protectorate over those part of the island not occupied by the Dutch.

Now real diplomacy begins. Before the above plan was carried out a gentleman in Berlin had an inspiration. There should be a conference on the subject. So a polite note was sent inviting the Secretary of the Colonies to Berlin. But before this admirable conference, suggested by Germany, had completed its weighty deliberations, a German ship had already arrived at Papua and annexed the northern part of the island, Kaiser Wilhelm's Land, and several of the adjoining islands.

The gentlemen of the Foreign Office were, of course, surprised and pained. Such a step had never been contemplated by them. But the German Chancellor of that period was not given to romantic illusions about abstractions like truth and honour. He had been hoodwinking the Foreign Office all the time, and was doubtless proud of such a coup. His name was Bismarck.

Now the whirligig of time has brought its revenge. Germany has lost all her South Sea Island Colonies. Another flag flies over the capital of Kaiser Wilhelm's Land. And the good-natured natives lying under the coconut palms by the coral sea do not lament the absence of Germanic Kultur.

Lucky Slips.

It is surprising how many useful things come into general use simply by some slip or inadvertency. Blotting-paper, for instance, was the result of a workman's spilling of a batch into which he had forgotten to put any sizing material. Nobel discovered dynamite by a slip, and the first bayonet was the result of a soldier's suggestion that, as the powder was done, they should fix their long knives into the barrels of their guns and charge.

But one of the funniest of accidental discoveries relates to bottled beer. In the reign of Queen Mary a certain Dean of St. Paul's and Master of Westminster School had to fly to the Continent for his life. He was angling by the silvery Thames at the time the warning reached him. Some years later he returned not only to England, but to the very spot for the very same purpose, with rod and line. Growing thirsty, he remembered that he had left a bottle of beer in the hollow of a neighbouring tree when he had suddenly taken flight some years before. The bottle was there, but when he removed the cork it went off with such a bang as to make him think it had been changed by the fairies to a gun!

Courtship at the Front.

Even such matters as courtship and marriage are now supervised by the military authorities.

A girl who was in the Q. M. A. A. C. at Boulogne became engaged. Engaged couples are allowed to remain in France, married couples are not. After a period of courtship her fiancé was informed that he was not for the front line at a certain time.

Then the burning question arose: Should she remain at Boulogne as a fiancée and a Q. M. A. A. C. and he go to the front or should they get married and go back to England?

They decided to marry.
First at the Consulate and then at the garrison church, Gerlie was married in a cleaned frock with patched elbows. The three days' official honeymoon was spent at a cottage rented by the authorities for the purpose—an official home for honeymoon couples. The cottage is in the care of a French housekeeper, whose charges are moderate.

Where Trees are Milked.

In British Guiana and the West Indies, particularly on the bank of the river Demerara, there grows a tree known to the natives as the "Ya-by-ya," which yields from its bark and pith a juice slightly richer and thicker than cow's milk. The tree is about forty feet high and eighteen inches in circumference when full grown, and the natives use its juice as we use milk, it being perfectly harmless, and mixing well with water.

The Cingalese have a tree—they call it "Kilraghuma"—which yields a fluid in all respects like milk; while in the forests of Para groks a tree called the "Massendendron," which gives a milk-like juice. It can be kept for an indefinite time, and shows no tendency to become sour.

On the other hand, certain trees in the valleys of Aragus and in Causgus yield a similar fluid, which when exposed to the air, begins to form into a kind of cheese, which very soon becomes sour.

In the Canary Islands there is a tree called "Tabaya Dolce," of which the milk, thickened into a jelly, is considered a delicacy.

Aerial Messenger

Great danger and difficulty are experienced in sending messages, observations and directions from the front-line trenches to the headquarters behind the lines. Of course, connection by telephone is maintained whenever possible. Sometimes telephone and telegraph wires are shot away. Besides, the enemy may have tapped the wires and be able to hear every word spoken.

The Germans have used several ingenious methods for overcoming these difficulties. The method in the observation trenches in front of the first line enclose their messages in a cylindrical metal box and shoot it by means of a grenade-thrower or a mine-thrower to the rear of the lines. To the box containing the message a red fire cartridge is attached, which is ignited by the explosion of the sending charge, and by its vivid glare plainly marks the spot where the box with the message dropped. The grenade-thrower, at an elevation of thirty-two degrees, sends the box to a maximum distance of six hundred yards.

War Calculations

A statement has lately been made to the effect that the war has cost all the nations engaged on either side the sum of £32,000,000,000. Such a statement is not really impressive, because it conveys very little of actuality to the human mind. An American paper has, however, come to the rescue of poor humanity, realising in a slough of figures and expressed this total in comprehensive terms.

It seems that the entire cost of the American Civil War has been duplicated every twelve weeks, and each period of five weeks of the present war would pay for the Franco-Prussian War. These thirty-two thousand millions sterling would pay for 400 Panama Canals, or would construct 92 world-encircling railways.

But the cost in human life and limb is far more terrible than any monetary cost. In the procession of the slain were to march past in battle array four deep ten years would pass and even then the procession would not be over. If, behind the dead came the host of maimed, blind, dumb and paralysed, fifty years would hardly exhaust this terrible spectacle. Yet unless we on this side of the world put down Prussian militarism, all this sacrifice may be in vain.

Mother! Look at his Tongue!

Give Him a Cascaret—Quick!

Won't eat? Don't scold! See if tongue is white, breath feverish, stomach sour.

TO MOTHERS! Nothing else "works" the nasty bile, the sour fermentations and constipation poison so gently but so thoroughly from the little stomach, liver and bowels like harmless Cascarets. While children usually fight against laxatives and cathartics, they gladly eat a candy Cascaret. Cascarets never gripe the bowels, never sicken. Each ten cent box of Cascarets contains directions for dose for children aged one year old and upwards.

World's Holidays

During the present year there are only eighty-four days on which the banks are open all over the world. On every one of the other 281 days some nation will be celebrating a civil or religious holiday, or observing the Sabbath.

Only one of those holidays is universal. This is New Year's Day, and eleven different dates are observed by various countries as the beginning of a new year. Five Christian countries do not observe Christmas as a legal holiday.

Brazil leads the nation in the number of its holidays. It has eighty-four, and the United States is second with fifty-four. France observes eighteen formal holidays during the year, and Italy twenty-three. Among the other belligerents Germany, it is presumed, will observe twenty days; Great Britain, sixteen, Japan fifteen, and Russia seventeen.

Among the favourite months for holidays the world over, November leads, with twenty-six out of its possible thirty days. May comes next with twenty-five.

Rich, Safe Milk for Your Children

YOU like to give your children lots of milk—you know it is the best and most economical food Nature provides.

Now you can always have fresh, pure milk in the house for them—when they need it—for breakfast cereal, for the between-meals drink, before going to bed—Carnation Milk "from Contented Cows."

Carnation Milk comes to you in uniform quality—pure, whole milk, evaporated to the consistency of cream.

Nothing but water is taken from this rich, pure milk. Nothing is put in to sweeten or to preserve it.

Carnation Milk stays fresh and sweet simply because it is sterilized and sealed safe in air-tight cans.

To reduce its richness, dilute it with water—you then have nourishing, safe milk for your children to drink.

Remember, you can use Carnation Milk for everything—cooking, creaming vegetables, as cream for coffee, etc. It is delicious when "whipped" (chill it first, of course). And it is always handy, always fresh, always pure—the only milk supply your home needs.

Order three or four cans in the new tall six-ounce with your groceries—your grocer is the Carnation Milkman.
