Her Life's Love

By a sudden instinct she seemed to catch his change of look, of tone. "Monsieur is very good," she said, gently, and questioned no more.

There was indeed no more to say, no possible excuse for him to remain, yet he lingered. Shy as a schoolboy, he felt as if he could not get out of the room.

"This evening at 6, then," said Mlle. Jardine, with gentle dismissal, not again offering her hand, but merely bowing, as Roderick walked—she felt very much like crawling —out of the salon.

And yet it was a glorious humility, a noble shame, a sensation more delicious than anything he had ever believed the world could offer. The world, so empty to him of sympathy, or love, that is the up-looking love, since his dear father died. He almost felt as if his father knew it all, the reflexes of what perhaps he too had known in his youth, the "love's young dream," which never comes twice. Happy those to whom it comes truly as love, and neither as passion or folly, who can say to themselves, as Roderick did during the weary hours between 12 and 6, "Now, what shall I do for her? What would she like me to do? Something, I am sure, that would be good and right."

And with this intent, and perhaps another behind it, he sat down and did, what he had forgotten to do day after day, ever since he had reached Neuchatel, he wrote a long letter home to his mother. A very at-tentionate, amusing, clever letter, just what he knew would please her, and which, as he also knew, she would show to every near and dear friend she had. Consequently, it was not exactly confidentially, indeed, Roderick was not in the habit of writing confidential letters to anybody; but it was quite honest, so far as it went, gave a glowing description of the Alps at Berne, and an amusing one of the soiree at Prof. Reynier's, and painted graphically the quaint little town of Neuchatel, where he said he intended to stay a few days longer, and ended by stating briefly how he had found, among M.
Reynier's guests, the object of his search, at least, all that was left to find, Archibald Jardine's widow and only surviving child.
Whether the "child" was old or young, boy or girl, he omitted to particularize—a degree of reserve which surprised, indeed, the ordinary rosiences of Mr. Roderick Jardine.

When Roderick went out to post his latter, he seemed to walk on air. Every corner of the quaint old town looked picturesque every passer-by interesting. For he had a vague hope—half fear too—that under some umbrella he might find the gray gown, black felt hat, and blue eyes.

Just on the faintest chance of this, he went round by the shore of the lake, where a sudden wild wind had caused the waves to rise and roll in, almost like a sea tide, greatly to the distress of the Neuchatelers.
Various motorboats had been carried away, and a large market basket was now tossing up and down upon actual breakers—while its luckless owner stood wringing her hands, and two or three men were wading in, trying to catch it with ropes.

Roderick went to help them; he never could forbear rushing to the rescue, in any case where his youthful strength was available. Presently he succeeded in saving the cart, and in wading himself to the shore; which he hardly felt, for in wading he saved the first sight he saw, fixed upon him, were those two earnest blue eyes!

She stood among the little crowd, her umbrella in one hand, a roll of muslin in the other, behind her a little white-capped bonne stood, full of sympathy—as indeed everybody was—first, with the owner of the cart, and then with its saviors. She recognized him at once.

"Oh, how good, monsieur!" she exclaimed warmly in French. "See, madame" (turning to the poor market-woman), "your cart is safe, absolutely uninjured. How kind, how brave of these men, and of this English gentleman!"

And then monsieur, half-deafened by the storm of thanks and applause from these warm Swiss hearts, was glad to beat a retreat, and find himself, he knew not how, walking along by the side of Mlle. Jardine, and talking, still in French about how it all happened.

"I have never seen the lake rise so," she said. "All the town has been down here watching the waves, which are higher, they say, than has been seen for twenty years—never since the year I was born."

She was 20 then; he had thought her younger.

"Mamma happened to be at Neuchatel, and remembers it well—that day—she had me in her arms, a little baby, and if papa had not held her fast, the waves and the wind would have swept us away, both of us.
How strange it seems!"

"Very strange; but life is very strange," said the young man, as he drank in, full of dreamy delight, the soft tones, the sudden sweet uplifting of those lovely eyes. They rested on his soiled clothes.

"Monsieur ought to go at once to his hotel," she said, with a pretty decision.
"Pardon; but I am so accustomed to look after people—to take care of them. I always take care of mamma, you know. She has been an invalid so long with her chest.
I think it is that which has given me a morbid terror of damp and wet. Au revoir till!"

And with a brief, sweet remorselessness, she bowed and passed on, picking her way through the water-channel and the mud, and never once looking behind.

This evening, with an involuntary and quite inexpressible fear, he did not seek for his diamond studs or any other resplendency of his always-careful toilet, but dressed himself as plainly as possible.

Again he climbed, but impatiently, joyously, as if it were a high road to heaven, the long stair which led to Mme. Jardine's door, and found that what he had hoped would be a party of trois was added to by the pleasant faces of M. Reynier and his daughters, and one or two other guests—not pleasant, however, to his eyes at all. Nevertheless he made the best of it. Most young men would have delightedly acted cavalier and to such a charming cluster of girls; but Roderick would a thousand times rather have sat beside this one girl and watched her pour out the tea and distribute the various condiments which seemed to compose this innocent evening meal, after the custom of the Neuchatel folk.

All the talk was in French, of course, but now and then "Mlle. Jardine" addressed him in English, to which he eagerly responded, as to a sweet secret of flattery in which the rest did not share. And how he thanked the benign fate which dragged away the masculine element in the party to some lecture—half Neuchatel seemed composed of professors or coadjutors—and compelled an early breaking up.

"But Monsieur Jardine, who is not at college, need not depart," said madame, courteously. "Will he not stay and tell us a little of his beautiful Scotland, which my husband loved so, and sometimes thought of once more, but he died without seeing it? Come and sit by me, cherie, and listen.
She loves her father's land almost as if she had seen it, does my daughter Silence."

Then Mme. Jardine questioned him rather closely about himself and his college life, watching him with great intentness, and with a gentle shrewdness which showed that amidst all her simplicity she was a far-seeing woman, not altogether ignorant of the world and its ways. Finally she drew from him the story of his journey and its object.

Nothing could exceed the astonishment of both mother and daughter when they learned that they had "inherited"—Roderick carefully put it in that light, trusting to his good luck to be able to explain it away afterward—inherited a sum of money from the Silence Jardine.

"How good of her! how generous!" cried Mme. Jardine, clasping her hands with one of those impulsive gestures which we English think so strange, but which in her seemed perfectly natural. But they had not descended to her daughter, who, in mien and manner was not at all what we term "foreign," but as quiet as any English girl.

"I should explain to you, monsieur," continued Mme. Jardine, "that in his youth my husband did his cousin a great kindness—nay, a wrong. He could not help it; she made him so unhappy. But all that is past now, and I—I made him happy. And she has made us rich—this good Cousin Silence."

"Not rich exactly," Roderick confessedly explained. "It is only an old house, with perhaps two or three hundred a year."

"Two or three hundred a year! Why, that is fortune, an absolute fortune! Let us bless the good God for it! Silence, my child, I shall not leave you in poverty!" She burst into tears, and then, wholly oblivious of the stranger's presence, mother and daughter fell into one another's arms and sobbed together.

A Great Battle

Is continually going on in the human system.
The demon of impure blood strives to gain victory over the constitution, to ruin health, to drag victims to the grave. Hood's Sarsaparilla combines with which with which to defeat the desperate enemy from the field, and restore bodily health for many years.

Hood's Pills cure nausea, sickness, indigestion and biliousness. 25 cents.

It is said that in London there are no fewer than 10,000 professional thieves, and of various grades, and that more than half of them are women.

Among the pains and aches cured with marvelous rapidity with Dr.
Thomas' Electric Oil is earache. The young are especially subject to it. The destrutibility of this Oil as a family remedy is enhanced by the fact that it is admirably adapted not only to the above ailments, but also to the disorders of the bowels, and affections of the throat, to which the young are especially subject.

In London nearly 264 streets are named after the Queen, while there are 241 Cross streets, 240 Albert streets, 212 Church streets and 181 Queen streets.

Why will you allow a cough to lacerate your throat or lungs and run the risk of filling a consumptive's grave, when by the timely use of Eick's Anti-Consumptive Syrup the pain can be allayed and the danger avoided?

This syrup is pleasant to the taste, and unsurpassed for relieving, healing and curing all affections of the throat and lungs, coughs, colds, bronchitis, etc.

AT DEATH'S DOOR.—DYSPEPSIA CURED.—THE GREAT MEDICAL TRIUMPH.—Gentlemen.—My medical adviser and others told me that I could not possibly live when I commenced the use of Northrup & Lyman's VEGE-
My case was one of the worst of its kind. For three years I could not eat meat, and my weight decreased from 215 to 115 pounds. All the food I took for three months previous to taking this remedy was vomited up. I was a

TRADE IN CANADA

As Shown by R. G. Dun & Co.'s Weekly Statement.

Small Probability of an Active Spring-Business Very Quiet.

TORONTO, Jan. 24.—R. G. Dun & Co.'s weekly statement of trade in Canada says: The improvement in the Montreal wholesale trade generally looked for about three months ago has not materialized as yet, and there does not seem to be any lively anticipations of an active spring. The grocery trade is still quiet, outside a very fair demand for sugars, probably due to indications that an upward turn is probable. Raw sugars are stiffer and refiners apparently less disposed to concede. The Redpath refinery, which has been shut down several weeks, is again starting up. Molasses is in very strong shape, and the only lot now held at 35 cents.

Some houses report fair dry goods orders, but country dealers are buying cautiously as a rule. A few west trade is described as in particularly bad shape, and quite a few houses are declining further business in that direction.

The local foundries and kindred industries are only partially employed, and there is but a slack demand for pig iron and other heavy metals.

Wool is being more inquired for, with some moderate sales reported at steady prices.

Hides are firm at the recent advance, and tanners are impressing on city consumers the necessity of getting better prices for their leather. There is now no shipping of splits, buffs, etc., to England, as prices there are below the local level.
Shoemakers are not yet cutting any large amount of stock, and no large lots of leather are selling.

General collections are susceptible of much improvement.

AT TORONTO.
The business situation at Toronto is unchanged. There is a moderate movement in staple goods, but in most lines there is no increase as compared with January of last year. The feeling prevails pretty generally, however, that a turn for the better is at hand. Merchants, both wholesale and retail, have for a year or so past been restricting their purchases, and the result is that stocks of general merchandise are probably smaller than for several years past. This of itself is a favorable feature, and with a return of the confidence expected the trade will be in a position to take advantage of the favorable circumstances.

A better market for sugar is reported, the demand being stimulated by higher prices in New York. Teas are also more active.

The movement of wheat throughout the Province is limited. Prices are low and hold out no inducements to sell. They are, however, comparatively higher in Ontario than elsewhere, and this fact gives rise to a belief that domestic stocks are not any too large for home consumption.
Red is quoted west at 56½ and white at 57c. White is about 6½ at Chicago and 58c at Toledo.

The failures for the week in the Dominion are 58, against 55 for the corresponding week last year.

HEART DISEASE.

A Toronto Physician Says It Never Exists Without the Presence of Some Kidney Disease.

TORONTO, Jan. 25.—The number of sudden deaths due to heart disease is appalling. The medical profession is devoting more attention to the heart and its ailments at the present time than ever before, and many physicians are making a specialty of diseases of this organ. A Toronto doctor, who devotes much attention to this branch of his practice, said to a reporter today: "I have yet to learn of a single case where heart disease caused death in which a post-mortem examination did not show the existence of Bright's disease, diabetes or some other kidney disease." Dodd's Kidney Pills will cure all diseases of the kidneys and thus ward off the danger of heart disease.

CASTORIA

for Infants and Children.

MOTHERS, Do You Know that Paregoric, Bateman's Drops, Godfrey's Cordial, many so-called Soothing Syrups, and most remedies for children are composed of opium or morphine?

Do You Know that opium and morphine are stupefying narcotic poisons?

Do You Know that in most countries druggists are not permitted to sell narcotics without labeling them poisons?

Do You Know that you should not permit any medicine to be given your child unless you or your physician know of what it is composed?

Do You Know that Castoria is a purely vegetable preparation, and that a list of its ingredients is published with every bottle?

Do You Know that Castoria is the prescription of the famous Dr. Samuel Pitcher. That it has been in use for nearly thirty years, and that more Castoria is now sold than of all other remedies for children combined?

Do You Know that the Patent Office Department of the United States, and of other countries, have issued exclusive right to Dr. Pitcher and his assigns to use the word "Castoria" and its formula, and that to imitate them is a state prison offense?

Do You Know that one of the reasons for granting this government protection was because Castoria had been proven to be absolutely harmless?

Do You Know that 35 average doses of Castoria are furnished for 35 cents, or one cent a dose?

Do You Know that when possessed of this perfect preparation, your children may be kept well, and that you may have unbroken rest?

Well, these things are worth knowing. They are facts.

The fac-simile signature of Chas. H. Pitcher is on every wrapper.

The Man

Who went out into the garden and planted a dollar bill in the ground, and then went back into the house and waited for it to grow, was half-brother to the man who rented a store, stocked it with goods, and did not advertise, but expected people to fall over each other in their eagerness to buy his goods because he had a large show window, and had bought a cheap stock.

The way to make dollars grow is to plant space in "The Advertiser." Weed out all untruths, apply a fertilizer occasionally in the shape of reduction on some one line, and you reap a rich harvest.
