BERLIN EXCHANGE RATES. Berlin, via London, July 11.—The ex-change rate on New York, which for a long time was nailed fast at 5.17 marks per dollar, equivalent on a New York basis of quotation to 77%, has been the Byron, following the road on the north subject of a moderate but steady rise in the past week. Today it reached 5.28. A noteworthy circumstances in the movement is that, while the Berlin rate remained stationary during the ens at Springbank, with tea and coffee steady decline of the rate in New York in June to a low record, the Berlin rise began after and in face of an improvement in New York.

921/2, with about the same degree of humidity as today. Notwithstanding the high temperature no heat prostrations had been reported at the hospitals this afternoon. The ice cream parlors are doing a "land office" business, and the public drinking fountain at the corner of Dundas and Richmond has had many a thirsty traveler quench his thirst there today.

The hottest temperature recorded for years in the city was on July 1, 1912, when a temperature of 1011/2 degrees was registered for that day. Extreme heat waves are usually of only short duration, and citizens may expect relief at least within a day or so. Everyone that could possibly get away has gone to Springbank or Port Stanley to seek relief.

Doctors advise during an extreme hot wave to avoid a meat diet as much as George William Barrett of the 135th possible, guard against ice-cold drinks, Pattalion, alleged to, be identical with alcoholic stimulants and over-exertion William J.
