Love.

WRITTEN FOR THE PRESS. Tis a queer world, 'tis a dear world Each sou sees passing by. Tis a little bit of the whole, yet it Must somewhere into the perfect fit;

Love shows the reason why. For love is here, and love is dear, And love shall never die Himself, nor slay his foe, but may Put new life into his heart some day.

Before all things go by. The cup of life is stirr'd by strife; Time turns with savage cry To force us drink, till nigh to the brink Of death, we half despairing sink, Sick, yet afraid to die. We turn and taste--with eager haste We drain the chalice dry; For love is there, and what is care To him who gains the smallest share Of that fine alchemy?

Bitter or sweet, our life's replete th love that cannot die; And if sweet to thee, 'tis sweet to me, And sweeter to all it still must be As earthly things go by.

O, young man! have decision of character. You can afford in this matter of religion to be laughed at. What do you care for the scoffs of these men, who are affronted because you will not go to ruin with them? When the grave cracks open under their feet, and grim messengers push them into it, and eternity comes down hard upon may take religion into their worldly bus iness. Daniel had enough work to do to occupy six men. All the affairs of state were in his hands—question of finance, sending petitions before God for thirty to do than Daniel, the Secretary of State, days. So far from being afraid, Daniel goes on ing before God in prayer. There are men with his supplications three times a day, in our day who have, not a hundredth part countant's pen, or dull the carpenter's saw, or confuse the lawyer's brief, or disarrange the merchant's store-shelf.

They think religion is impertinent. They would like to have it very well seated beside them in church on the Sabbath, to find add I, with a glance at the two bonnets that now repose upon a side table, not in the least applying the text in question to them, but still feeling that they made a very tolerable show.

"Yes," said Sister Janet, giving the kettle at the touch, since it seemed rather inclined to tilt upon its nose, "the years run by very quickly in quiet lives like ours. I suppose each one is so like the others that it is hard to distinguish them."

"This has seemed somehow different," I hazarded, a certain shy feeling coming over me as I spoke.

"Ah, yes," said Sister Janet, "they have been here nearly a year now," and she waved her knitting pin toward Mrs. Ruthven's side of the Crescent.
