No 47 | SAINT ANDREWS, N. B., WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 21, 1849.

In their fresh prime so dear, That thus the spirit mourneth o'er The rule of the year ? No 1 Tis because true types are they Of leveller, dearer things ; Hopes, joys, transports, into which The soul so foodly chips.

There is a moral in each leaf That droppeth from the tree ; In each lone, barren bo gh that points To heaven so mournfully ; Mute Nature, in her silent way, A mysue lesson tells,

And they who wacth the sybil well May prdit by her spells.

IT IS NOT WI .TER YET. The withered leaves are falling round, Less bright the mountide radiance glows ; Few flowers are in the garden found, And chill the night wind plows But wherefore wear a brow of gloom, Or speak of summer with regret ? Still many bods are left to bloom-It is not winter vet.

'Tis ever thus in human life : Too of the glance is backward cast; We turn from scenes with pleasure rifey
