

The Weekly Monitor

ESTABLISHED 1878.

Published every Wednesday by the publisher

FRANK H. BEATTIE, EDITOR AND MANAGER

Sub. Rates—$2.00 a year, 25c to U.S. payable strictly in advance

Advertisements regarding subscriptions, advertising or other business matters, as well as correspondence and news, should be addressed to the Manager of the Weekly Monitor.

WEDNESDAY, JULY 7TH, 1925

Press Comment

IT SOMETIMES DOES.
Indianapolis News: It is said, and truly, that a tariff should never be levied in order to cover up inefficiency or to protect those who show lack of effort.

SCIENTIFIC RESEARCH
The Australasian: For the industrial and economic prospects of the Commonwealth there can be no more profitable investment than a well-directed department of scientific research.

LAND FOR SETTLERS.
Johannesburg Sunday Times: Great Britain need have no fear of her surplus population when the dola ceases to exist. Canada, Australasia, and South Africa between them can find room for all who are able and willing to work on the land.

BALDWIN AND BUSINESS
Leo Maxvise in the National Review: Without cultivating any of the arts of the demagogue, and probably on that account, as the British public are sick of demagogues and other charlatans, Mr. Baldwin made a great and some people think an abiding impression on the country by his unadorned and systematic treatment of industrial problems.

THE PROFESSIONAL FARMER
Sydney (N.S.W.) Bulletin: That slack farming methods do not pay is generally accepted; but that slack farming methods are a waste of national assets and an injury to the landless population must be the creed of the future. Already there are abundant signs that the farmer must be a scientist highly educated in his business and understanding to the last point the natural forces which he calls into play. As such he will take his place as a professional man—the most highly respected professional man of all.

PEACE IN THE PACIFIC.
Perth (Australia) Western Mail: Japan is neither financially nor industrially equipped for war with America. She has no steel, produces very little iron, and imports much rice and cotton; in short, she is not in immediate possession of the resources a modern nation requires to wage war. Japan could only acquire such resources by occupying China or Siberia, and to secure that her control must be so widely distributed as to hamper seriously her conflict with an outside power.

GRADE CROSSINGS
New York Herald-Tribune: The fact that the advertising campaign launched last year to awaken motorists to the danger of accident at railroad crossings has apparently reduced the number of such accidents has encouraged its promoters to redouble their efforts in this direction during the coming summer and autumn. It is well to keep the public alive to the menace that exists wherever it is possible for locomotives and automobiles to attempt to occupy the same space at the same time.

EMPIRE CO-OPERATION
London Daily News: The Dominions have acquired from their experience of the war, and subsequently from their membership of the League of Nations a new sense of nationhood and independence. They have learnt to think for themselves. And the greatest danger to the unity of the British Commonwealth will be in a failure, in the immediate future, to discover some simple method of direct and continuous contact between all parts of the Empire by which an agreed policy may be developed upon which in all emergencies common action is based.

NOVA SCOTIA ELECTIONS.

There is joy in Conservative circles all over Canada today over the almost total annihilation of the Liberals in Thursday's provincial election in Nova Scotia. The election of 40 Conservatives and only 3 Liberals makes that victory one of the most decisive in provincial political history and fully justifies whatever of party enthusiasm it may inspire. Joy expressed party satisfaction that forty-three years of Liberal rule is to end. It inspires party hopes that as Nova Scotia has voted in the provincial field, so Nova Scotia will vote when the federal election comes. But many precedents in Canadian political history prove that it is not wise to attract very great national significance to provincial contests. However that may be, the Conservatives have reason enough for joy over Thursday's victory. It matters not what causes contributed to the result, it is a signal and perhaps significant verdict. The turn over and many of the majorities indicate that the tide of popular opinion was strong against the government. Reasons for this were many. The desire for a change of government, dissatisfaction with the government's attitude toward the Cape Breton troubles, hard times, and a new premier very probably strongly influenced the popular mind. Under successive premiers, including Hon. E. H. Armstrong, the Liberal party has given Nova Scotia pretty good government, as that term is understood. Perhaps its greatest mistake, and the one which did it the greatest harm, was its failure to follow the splendid example set by New Brunswick in connection with its hydro development policy. Its leaders have enjoyed great personal popularity. There have been no scandals, such as have marred Conservative rule in this province. It was inevitable that an end must come to this long tenure of office, and the retirement of Hon. George H. Murray after the longest premiership in the history of any Empire administration probably did more to weaken the government's hold on the public than any other single thing. Mr. Armstrong was the hero of the years and he has to his credit the inauguration of a most successful Nova Scotia road policy. His successor, Hon. E. N. Rhodes, formerly Speaker of the House of Commons, enjoys the good opinion of all who know him. He is a man of ability. He will take up the reins of office facing many difficulties, and not all of them of provincial making. It may be that his large following will prove an embarrassing asset as did the similar following in New Brunswick. He has promised Nova Scotia much. The extent to which he can redeem those promises remains to be demonstrated.

ONTARIO PUBLICITY

Campaign being planned on Continental Scale.
Toronto: Publicity for Ontario up to a continental scale is planned by the Ontario Government, according to arrangements completed today. It is planned to bring famous radio entertainers to the province for three weeks' visit.
The troupe will arrive on July 1st and will spend three weeks tripping about the wild beauty spots of Ontario, such as Algonquin Park, Temagami and other resorts, and will send entertainment from a portable broadcaster which they will set up in their camp each evening. On Saturday evenings the party will return to the Parliament Buildings, Toronto, and will broadcast week-end concerts and talks upon the province's beauty spots. These week-end programmes will be carried over "the web" which is the radio circuit covering all of eastern United States.

GULLS FLY AROUND WORLD

That gulls and terns inhabiting the great lakes region scatter over a wide range during their migratory flights has been indicated by a check-up kept on banded birds, according to William I. Lyon of the Inland Bird Association, who marks more than 3,500 of the fowl yearly in an effort to learn their length of life, mating habits and traveling ability. Even those reared in the same neighborhoods of the northern climes have been found to follow different routes on their winter flights. A pair of terns released after capture and banding in Northern Lake Michigan, were trapped in Columbia, and another specimen, taken along the Niger River in Africa, bore a marker which had been attached to it on the coast of Maine. Others identified by bands were found to have traveled from the great lakes to points in

PROTESTED THE U. S. DUTY ON SILVER FOX FURS.
Maritime Provincialist at Fox Institute Meeting Held It Was "Unprecedented, Unwarranted and a Detriment to the Industry."
Montreal.—A protest against the United States duty on silver foxes and silver fox furs from Canada was lodged with directors of the American Fox Institute Saturday by Chester S. McClure, of Charlottetown, P. E. I., the dean of fox fur dealers in the Dominion.
Mr. McClure attacked the duty, which the United States fixes at 50 per cent. on silver fox pelts, as "unprecedented, unwarranted, and a detriment to the industry in the States, as well as Canada." A few "selfish ranchers in the States who had great political influence" caused Congress to legislate the duty, he said. The result, as Mr. McClure pictured it, was that the prices of Canadian furs became so prohibitive by the time they reached the United States markets that the retail demand was seriously affected.
Dr. D. B. Armstrong of Watertown, N. Y., one of the principal fox ranchers in the States, expressed a conviction that it would be next to impossible to influence Congress to abolish the duty. He said he thought that supporters of the fox duties would gain the ear of the Arabian bazaar in Congress and thus frustrate any move to lower or abolish the existing rates.
Louis Edward Rusch of Washington, D. C., President of the Institute, assured the Canadian delegation that the Institute would "co-operate to the full toward establishing the Canadian and American branches of the industry on a second economic basis."
Sessions of the Institute "directors" which had been in progress at the Mount Royal Hotel for three days, concluded Saturday with executive committees and "open meetings" attended by fox men from many cities as well as Dominion Government livestock experts. The directors decided to engage the services of six nationally known judges of foxes who will join the staff that will tour ranches of the continent during the fall and winter, scientifically scoring and charting foxes while their furs are in prime.
George Morrison of Seattle, Wash., who in the last year has traveled 25,000 miles inspecting hundreds of ranches throughout the continent, aroused a heated discussion on the subject of "the transmission of acquired characteristics" when he announced that fifty 80 per cent of the 120,000 so-called silver black foxes in America were tinged with brown at birth or acquired brown pelts after the first year. Mr. Morrison reported that it had been definitely established that this change of pelt color was due to faulty feeding, in many instances, but in the majority of cases to the effect of the sun's violent rays upon the fox's fur which became bleached if the animal was kept out of the shade.
The directors voted to undertake a thorough research with a view to correct these conditions.

ENDED BY TAKING LYDIA E. PINKHAM'S VEGETABLE COMPOUND

Fuslier, Sask.—"For two or three days every so often I would have such pains in my back and sides that I could not do anything—could not even lie quietly in bed, and my head ached, too. I was this way about three years, but was worse after I was married. I was on a farm with not a house nearer than five miles and there was not a person to advise me, as my folks live in Manitoba. My sister-in-law told me about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I took her advice and have been thankful for it ever since. After taking the medicine for three months I can say it has helped me a lot and I am doing fine. I am glad to recommend the Vegetable Compound to others and you may publish my testimony."—Mrs. HELEN BALANOFF-Fuslier, Saskatchewan.
Often some slight trouble will cause a general upset of the system. Such symptoms as nervousness, painful twinges, irregularity, backache and headache indicate some form of female weakness. Women who bothered should give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial. This dependable medicine has helped thousands of women and it is reasonable to expect that it will help you. Try it today. Your druggist sells this medicine.

BEAUTIFUL FLOWERS AT BIER OF MRS. BALCOM.

The funeral services for Helen W. Balcom, wife of Wm. F. Balcom, 292 Pleasant st., was held at her late home Sunday afternoon at 2:30. Rev. Dr. W. Quay Rossell of the First Baptist church officiated with vocal selections of "Over the River" and "Sometime We'll Unravel," rendered by Miss Bessie Balcom.
Many friends attended and the interment was at Forest Dale cemetery. The pallbearers were Wm. Chapman, Vernon Balcom, Percy Dargie and H. A. Balcom.
Floral pieces were sent by the St. Joseph's Lodge of Robbinston, Women's Society of the First Baptist church, Young Women's Bible Class, Moss Brotherhood, Orl. and Mrs. A. L. Austin, Mrs. and Mrs. Stephenson, Mr. and Mrs. Usher, Mr. and Mrs. Audenaert, Mrs. Leaton, Mr. and Mrs. Chaisson, Miss Isabelle Rood, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Morgan and family, Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Quinn, Mr. and Mrs. Russell G. Green, Mr. and Mrs. Percy Dargie, Mr. and Mrs. E. Root, Warren R. Farland, the Misses Axman, Mr. and Mrs. Murray Garry, Mr. and Mrs. W. Lamb, Mr. and Mrs. T. H. Bush, Joseph Chapman and family, Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Fadden, Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Higgins, Mr. and Mrs. J. B. McKay, Mr. and Mrs. L. H. Dodds, John E. Whitcomb and Harold Mason, Miss Ruth Moulton, Mrs. Charles Moulton, Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Mann, Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Balcom, Mr. and Mrs. Vernon Balcom, Mrs. Minnie Balcom and Miss Bessie Balcom, of Malden; Fred Marshall, Mrs. Myrna Pike, Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Welch, Newham; Mr. and Mrs. Fred Marshall, Windroy, James E. Esard and family, Fore River; Cade; Alice Burton, New York.
(Malden News)

PROTESTED THE U. S. DUTY ON SILVER FOX FURS.
Maritime Provincialist at Fox Institute Meeting Held It Was "Unprecedented, Unwarranted and a Detriment to the Industry."
Montreal.—A protest against the United States duty on silver foxes and silver fox furs from Canada was lodged with directors of the American Fox Institute Saturday by Chester S. McClure, of Charlottetown, P. E. I., the dean of fox fur dealers in the Dominion.
Mr. McClure attacked the duty, which the United States fixes at 50 per cent. on silver fox pelts, as "unprecedented, unwarranted, and a detriment to the industry in the States, as well as Canada." A few "selfish ranchers in the States who had great political influence" caused Congress to legislate the duty, he said. The result, as Mr. McClure pictured it, was that the prices of Canadian furs became so prohibitive by the time they reached the United States markets that the retail demand was seriously affected.
Dr. D. B. Armstrong of Watertown, N. Y., one of the principal fox ranchers in the States, expressed a conviction that it would be next to impossible to influence Congress to abolish the duty. He said he thought that supporters of the fox duties would gain the ear of the Arabian bazaar in Congress and thus frustrate any move to lower or abolish the existing rates.
Louis Edward Rusch of Washington, D. C., President of the Institute, assured the Canadian delegation that the Institute would "co-operate to the full toward establishing the Canadian and American branches of the industry on a second economic basis."
Sessions of the Institute "directors" which had been in progress at the Mount Royal Hotel for three days, concluded Saturday with executive committees and "open meetings" attended by fox men from many cities as well as Dominion Government livestock experts. The directors decided to engage the services of six nationally known judges of foxes who will join the staff that will tour ranches of the continent during the fall and winter, scientifically scoring and charting foxes while their furs are in prime.
George Morrison of Seattle, Wash., who in the last year has traveled 25,000 miles inspecting hundreds of ranches throughout the continent, aroused a heated discussion on the subject of "the transmission of acquired characteristics" when he announced that fifty 80 per cent of the 120,000 so-called silver black foxes in America were tinged with brown at birth or acquired brown pelts after the first year. Mr. Morrison reported that it had been definitely established that this change of pelt color was due to faulty feeding, in many instances, but in the majority of cases to the effect of the sun's violent rays upon the fox's fur which became bleached if the animal was kept out of the shade.
The directors voted to undertake a thorough research with a view to correct these conditions.

PROTESTED THE U. S. DUTY ON SILVER FOX FURS.
Maritime Provincialist at Fox Institute Meeting Held It Was "Unprecedented, Unwarranted and a Detriment to the Industry."
Montreal.—A protest against the United States duty on silver foxes and silver fox furs from Canada was lodged with directors of the American Fox Institute Saturday by Chester S. McClure, of Charlottetown, P. E. I., the dean of fox fur dealers in the Dominion.
Mr. McClure attacked the duty, which the United States fixes at 50 per cent. on silver fox pelts, as "unprecedented, unwarranted, and a detriment to the industry in the States, as well as Canada." A few "selfish ranchers in the States who had great political influence" caused Congress to legislate the duty, he said. The result, as Mr. McClure pictured it, was that the prices of Canadian furs became so prohibitive by the time they reached the United States markets that the retail demand was seriously affected.
Dr. D. B. Armstrong of Watertown, N. Y., one of the principal fox ranchers in the States, expressed a conviction that it would be next to impossible to influence Congress to abolish the duty. He said he thought that supporters of the fox duties would gain the ear of the Arabian bazaar in Congress and thus frustrate any move to lower or abolish the existing rates.
Louis Edward Rusch of Washington, D. C., President of the Institute, assured the Canadian delegation that the Institute would "co-operate to the full toward establishing the Canadian and American branches of the industry on a second economic basis."
Sessions of the Institute "directors" which had been in progress at the Mount Royal Hotel for three days, concluded Saturday with executive committees and "open meetings" attended by fox men from many cities as well as Dominion Government livestock experts. The directors decided to engage the services of six nationally known judges of foxes who will join the staff that will tour ranches of the continent during the fall and winter, scientifically scoring and charting foxes while their furs are in prime.
George Morrison of Seattle, Wash., who in the last year has traveled 25,000 miles inspecting hundreds of ranches throughout the continent, aroused a heated discussion on the subject of "the transmission of acquired characteristics" when he announced that fifty 80 per cent of the 120,000 so-called silver black foxes in America were tinged with brown at birth or acquired brown pelts after the first year. Mr. Morrison reported that it had been definitely established that this change of pelt color was due to faulty feeding, in many instances, but in the majority of cases to the effect of the sun's violent rays upon the fox's fur which became bleached if the animal was kept out of the shade.
The directors voted to undertake a thorough research with a view to correct these conditions.

PROTESTED THE U. S. DUTY ON SILVER FOX FURS.
Maritime Provincialist at Fox Institute Meeting Held It Was "Unprecedented, Unwarranted and a Detriment to the Industry."
Montreal.—A protest against the United States duty on silver foxes and silver fox furs from Canada was lodged with directors of the American Fox Institute Saturday by Chester S. McClure, of Charlottetown, P. E. I., the dean of fox fur dealers in the Dominion.
Mr. McClure attacked the duty, which the United States fixes at 50 per cent. on silver fox pelts, as "unprecedented, unwarranted, and a detriment to the industry in the States, as well as Canada." A few "selfish ranchers in the States who had great political influence" caused Congress to legislate the duty, he said. The result, as Mr. McClure pictured it, was that the prices of Canadian furs became so prohibitive by the time they reached the United States markets that the retail demand was seriously affected.
Dr. D. B. Armstrong of Watertown, N. Y., one of the principal fox ranchers in the States, expressed a conviction that it would be next to impossible to influence Congress to abolish the duty. He said he thought that supporters of the fox duties would gain the ear of the Arabian bazaar in Congress and thus frustrate any move to lower or abolish the existing rates.
Louis Edward Rusch of Washington, D. C., President of the Institute, assured the Canadian delegation that the Institute would "co-operate to the full toward establishing the Canadian and American branches of the industry on a second economic basis."
Sessions of the Institute "directors" which had been in progress at the Mount Royal Hotel for three days, concluded Saturday with executive committees and "open meetings" attended by fox men from many cities as well as Dominion Government livestock experts. The directors decided to engage the services of six nationally known judges of foxes who will join the staff that will tour ranches of the continent during the fall and winter, scientifically scoring and charting foxes while their furs are in prime.
George Morrison of Seattle, Wash., who in the last year has traveled 25,000 miles inspecting hundreds of ranches throughout the continent, aroused a heated discussion on the subject of "the transmission of acquired characteristics" when he announced that fifty 80 per cent of the 120,000 so-called silver black foxes in America were tinged with brown at birth or acquired brown pelts after the first year. Mr. Morrison reported that it had been definitely established that this change of pelt color was due to faulty feeding, in many instances, but in the majority of cases to the effect of the sun's violent rays upon the fox's fur which became bleached if the animal was kept out of the shade.
The directors voted to undertake a thorough research with a view to correct these conditions.

PROTESTED THE U. S. DUTY ON SILVER FOX FURS.
Maritime Provincialist at Fox Institute Meeting Held It Was "Unprecedented, Unwarranted and a Detriment to the Industry."
Montreal.—A protest against the United States duty on silver foxes and silver fox furs from Canada was lodged with directors of the American Fox Institute Saturday by Chester S. McClure, of Charlottetown, P. E. I., the dean of fox fur dealers in the Dominion.
Mr. McClure attacked the duty, which the United States fixes at 50 per cent. on silver fox pelts, as "unprecedented, unwarranted, and a detriment to the industry in the States, as well as Canada." A few "selfish ranchers in the States who had great political influence" caused Congress to legislate the duty, he said. The result, as Mr. McClure pictured it, was that the prices of Canadian furs became so prohibitive by the time they reached the United States markets that the retail demand was seriously affected.
Dr. D. B. Armstrong of Watertown, N. Y., one of the principal fox ranchers in the States, expressed a conviction that it would be next to impossible to influence Congress to abolish the duty. He said he thought that supporters of the fox duties would gain the ear of the Arabian bazaar in Congress and thus frustrate any move to lower or abolish the existing rates.
Louis Edward Rusch of Washington, D. C., President of the Institute, assured the Canadian delegation that the Institute would "co-operate to the full toward establishing the Canadian and American branches of the industry on a second economic basis."
Sessions of the Institute "directors" which had been in progress at the Mount Royal Hotel for three days, concluded Saturday with executive committees and "open meetings" attended by fox men from many cities as well as Dominion Government livestock experts. The directors decided to engage the services of six nationally known judges of foxes who will join the staff that will tour ranches of the continent during the fall and winter, scientifically scoring and charting foxes while their furs are in prime.
George Morrison of Seattle, Wash., who in the last year has traveled 25,000 miles inspecting hundreds of ranches throughout the continent, aroused a heated discussion on the subject of "the transmission of acquired characteristics" when he announced that fifty 80 per cent of the 120,000 so-called silver black foxes in America were tinged with brown at birth or acquired brown pelts after the first year. Mr. Morrison reported that it had been definitely established that this change of pelt color was due to faulty feeding, in many instances, but in the majority of cases to the effect of the sun's violent rays upon the fox's fur which became bleached if the animal was kept out of the shade.
The directors voted to undertake a thorough research with a view to correct these conditions.

PROTESTED THE U. S. DUTY ON SILVER FOX FURS.
Maritime Provincialist at Fox Institute Meeting Held It Was "Unprecedented, Unwarranted and a Detriment to the Industry."
Montreal.—A protest against the United States duty on silver foxes and silver fox furs from Canada was lodged with directors of the American Fox Institute Saturday by Chester S. McClure, of Charlottetown, P. E. I., the dean of fox fur dealers in the Dominion.
Mr. McClure attacked the duty, which the United States fixes at 50 per cent. on silver fox pelts, as "unprecedented, unwarranted, and a detriment to the industry in the States, as well as Canada." A few "selfish ranchers in the States who had great political influence" caused Congress to legislate the duty, he said. The result, as Mr. McClure pictured it, was that the prices of Canadian furs became so prohibitive by the time they reached the United States markets that the retail demand was seriously affected.
Dr. D. B. Armstrong of Watertown, N. Y., one of the principal fox ranchers in the States, expressed a conviction that it would be next to impossible to influence Congress to abolish the duty. He said he thought that supporters of the fox duties would gain the ear of the Arabian bazaar in Congress and thus frustrate any move to lower or abolish the existing rates.
Louis Edward Rusch of Washington, D. C., President of the Institute, assured the Canadian delegation that the Institute would "co-operate to the full toward establishing the Canadian and American branches of the industry on a second economic basis."
Sessions of the Institute "directors" which had been in progress at the Mount Royal Hotel for three days, concluded Saturday with executive committees and "open meetings" attended by fox men from many cities as well as Dominion Government livestock experts. The directors decided to engage the services of six nationally known judges of foxes who will join the staff that will tour ranches of the continent during the fall and winter, scientifically scoring and charting foxes while their furs are in prime.
George Morrison of Seattle, Wash., who in the last year has traveled 25,000 miles inspecting hundreds of ranches throughout the continent, aroused a heated discussion on the subject of "the transmission of acquired characteristics" when he announced that fifty 80 per cent of the 120,000 so-called silver black foxes in America were tinged with brown at birth or acquired brown pelts after the first year. Mr. Morrison reported that it had been definitely established that this change of pelt color was due to faulty feeding, in many instances, but in the majority of cases to the effect of the sun's violent rays upon the fox's fur which became bleached if the animal was kept out of the shade.
The directors voted to undertake a thorough research with a view to correct these conditions.

PROTESTED THE U. S. DUTY ON SILVER FOX FURS.
Maritime Provincialist at Fox Institute Meeting Held It Was "Unprecedented, Unwarranted and a Detriment to the Industry."
Montreal.—A protest against the United States duty on silver foxes and silver fox furs from Canada was lodged with directors of the American Fox Institute Saturday by Chester S. McClure, of Charlottetown, P. E. I., the dean of fox fur dealers in the Dominion.
Mr. McClure attacked the duty, which the United States fixes at 50 per cent. on silver fox pelts, as "unprecedented, unwarranted, and a detriment to the industry in the States, as well as Canada." A few "selfish ranchers in the States who had great political influence" caused Congress to legislate the duty, he said. The result, as Mr. McClure pictured it, was that the prices of Canadian furs became so prohibitive by the time they reached the United States markets that the retail demand was seriously affected.
Dr. D. B. Armstrong of Watertown, N. Y., one of the principal fox ranchers in the States, expressed a conviction that it would be next to impossible to influence Congress to abolish the duty. He said he thought that supporters of the fox duties would gain the ear of the Arabian bazaar in Congress and thus frustrate any move to lower or abolish the existing rates.
Louis Edward Rusch of Washington, D. C., President of the Institute, assured the Canadian delegation that the Institute would "co-operate to the full toward establishing the Canadian and American branches of the industry on a second economic basis."
Sessions of the Institute "directors" which had been in progress at the Mount Royal Hotel for three days, concluded Saturday with executive committees and "open meetings" attended by fox men from many cities as well as Dominion Government livestock experts. The directors decided to engage the services of six nationally known judges of foxes who will join the staff that will tour ranches of the continent during the fall and winter, scientifically scoring and charting foxes while their furs are in prime.
George Morrison of Seattle, Wash., who in the last year has traveled 25,000 miles inspecting hundreds of ranches throughout the continent, aroused a heated discussion on the subject of "the transmission of acquired characteristics" when he announced that fifty 80 per cent of the 120,000 so-called silver black foxes in America were tinged with brown at birth or acquired brown pelts after the first year. Mr. Morrison reported that it had been definitely established that this change of pelt color was due to faulty feeding, in many instances, but in the majority of cases to the effect of the sun's violent rays upon the fox's fur which became bleached if the animal was kept out of the shade.
The directors voted to undertake a thorough research with a view to correct these conditions.

PROTESTED THE U. S. DUTY ON SILVER FOX FURS.
Maritime Provincialist at Fox Institute Meeting Held It Was "Unprecedented, Unwarranted and a Detriment to the Industry."
Montreal.—A protest against the United States duty on silver foxes and silver fox furs from Canada was lodged with directors of the American Fox Institute Saturday by Chester S. McClure, of Charlottetown, P. E. I., the dean of fox fur dealers in the Dominion.
Mr. McClure attacked the duty, which the United States fixes at 50 per cent. on silver fox pelts, as "unprecedented, unwarranted, and a detriment to the industry in the States, as well as Canada." A few "selfish ranchers in the States who had great political influence" caused Congress to legislate the duty, he said. The result, as Mr. McClure pictured it, was that the prices of Canadian furs became so prohibitive by the time they reached the United States markets that the retail demand was seriously affected.
Dr. D. B. Armstrong of Watertown, N. Y., one of the principal fox ranchers in the States, expressed a conviction that it would be next to impossible to influence Congress to abolish the duty. He said he thought that supporters of the fox duties would gain the ear of the Arabian bazaar in Congress and thus frustrate any move to lower or abolish the existing rates.
Louis Edward Rusch of Washington, D. C., President of the Institute, assured the Canadian delegation that the Institute would "co-operate to the full toward establishing the Canadian and American branches of the industry on a second economic basis."
Sessions of the Institute "directors" which had been in progress at the Mount Royal Hotel for three days, concluded Saturday with executive committees and "open meetings" attended by fox men from many cities as well as Dominion Government livestock experts. The directors decided to engage the services of six nationally known judges of foxes who will join the staff that will tour ranches of the continent during the fall and winter, scientifically scoring and charting foxes while their furs are in prime.
George Morrison of Seattle, Wash., who in the last year has traveled 25,000 miles inspecting hundreds of ranches throughout the continent, aroused a heated discussion on the subject of "the transmission of acquired characteristics" when he announced that fifty 80 per cent of the 120,000 so-called silver black foxes in America were tinged with brown at birth or acquired brown pelts after the first year. Mr. Morrison reported that it had been definitely established that this change of pelt color was due to faulty feeding, in many instances, but in the majority of cases to the effect of the sun's violent rays upon the fox's fur which became bleached if the animal was kept out of the shade.
The directors voted to undertake a thorough research with a view to correct these conditions.

PROTESTED THE U. S. DUTY ON SILVER FOX FURS.
Maritime Provincialist at Fox Institute Meeting Held It Was "Unprecedented, Unwarranted and a Detriment to the Industry."
Montreal.—A protest against the United States duty on silver foxes and silver fox furs from Canada was lodged with directors of the American Fox Institute Saturday by Chester S. McClure, of Charlottetown, P. E. I., the dean of fox fur dealers in the Dominion.
Mr. McClure attacked the duty, which the United States fixes at 50 per cent. on silver fox pelts, as "unprecedented, unwarranted, and a detriment to the industry in the States, as well as Canada." A few "selfish ranchers in the States who had great political influence" caused Congress to legislate the duty, he said. The result, as Mr. McClure pictured it, was that the prices of Canadian furs became so prohibitive by the time they reached the United States markets that the retail demand was seriously affected.
Dr. D. B. Armstrong of Watertown, N. Y., one of the principal fox ranchers in the States, expressed a conviction that it would be next to impossible to influence Congress to abolish the duty. He said he thought that supporters of the fox duties would gain the ear of the Arabian bazaar in Congress and thus frustrate any move to lower or abolish the existing rates.
Louis Edward Rusch of Washington, D. C., President of the Institute, assured the Canadian delegation that the Institute would "co-operate to the full toward establishing the Canadian and American branches of the industry on a second economic basis."
Sessions of the Institute "directors" which had been in progress at the Mount Royal Hotel for three days, concluded Saturday with executive committees and "open meetings" attended by fox men from many cities as well as Dominion Government livestock experts. The directors decided to engage the services of six nationally known judges of foxes who will join the staff that will tour ranches of the continent during the fall and winter, scientifically scoring and charting foxes while their furs are in prime.
George Morrison of Seattle, Wash., who in the last year has traveled 25,000 miles inspecting hundreds of ranches throughout the continent, aroused a heated discussion on the subject of "the transmission of acquired characteristics" when he announced that fifty 80 per cent of the 120,000 so-called silver black foxes in America were tinged with brown at birth or acquired brown pelts after the first year. Mr. Morrison reported that it had been definitely established that this change of pelt color was due to faulty feeding, in many instances, but in the majority of cases to the effect of the sun's violent rays upon the fox's fur which became bleached if the animal was kept out of the shade.
The directors voted to undertake a thorough research with a view to correct these conditions.

PROTESTED THE U. S. DUTY ON SILVER FOX FURS.
Maritime Provincialist at Fox Institute Meeting Held It Was "Unprecedented, Unwarranted and a Detriment to the Industry."
Montreal.—A protest against the United States duty on silver foxes and silver fox furs from Canada was lodged with directors of the American Fox Institute Saturday by Chester S. McClure, of Charlottetown, P. E. I., the dean of fox fur dealers in the Dominion.
Mr. McClure attacked the duty, which the United States fixes at 50 per cent. on silver fox pelts, as "unprecedented, unwarranted, and a detriment to the industry in the States, as well as Canada." A few "selfish ranchers in the States who had great political influence" caused Congress to legislate the duty, he said. The result, as Mr. McClure pictured it, was that the prices of Canadian furs became so prohibitive by the time they reached the United States markets that the retail demand was seriously affected.
Dr. D. B. Armstrong of Watertown, N. Y., one of the principal fox ranchers in the States, expressed a conviction that it would be next to impossible to influence Congress to abolish the duty. He said he thought that supporters of the fox duties would gain the ear of the Arabian bazaar in Congress and thus frustrate any move to lower or abolish the existing rates.
Louis Edward Rusch of Washington, D. C., President of the Institute, assured the Canadian delegation that the Institute would "co-operate to the full toward establishing the Canadian and American branches of the industry on a second economic basis."
Sessions of the Institute "directors" which had been in progress at the Mount Royal Hotel for three days, concluded Saturday with executive committees and "open meetings" attended by fox men from many cities as well as Dominion Government livestock experts. The directors decided to engage the services of six nationally known judges of foxes who will join the staff that will tour ranches of the continent during the fall and winter, scientifically scoring and charting foxes while their furs are in prime.
George Morrison of Seattle, Wash., who in the last year has traveled 25,000 miles inspecting hundreds of ranches throughout the continent, aroused a heated discussion on the subject of "the transmission of acquired characteristics" when he announced that fifty 80 per cent of the 120,000 so-called silver black foxes in America were tinged with brown at birth or acquired brown pelts after the first year. Mr. Morrison reported that it had been definitely established that this change of pelt color was due to faulty feeding, in many instances, but in the majority of cases to the effect of the sun's violent rays upon the fox's fur which became bleached if the animal was kept out of the shade.
The directors voted to undertake a thorough research with a view to correct these conditions.

PROTESTED THE U. S. DUTY ON SILVER FOX FURS.
Maritime Provincialist at Fox Institute Meeting Held It Was "Unprecedented, Unwarranted and a Detriment to the Industry."
Montreal.—A protest against the United States duty on silver foxes and silver fox furs from Canada was lodged with directors of the American Fox Institute Saturday by Chester S. McClure, of Charlottetown, P. E. I., the dean of fox fur dealers in the Dominion.
Mr. McClure attacked the duty, which the United States fixes at 50 per cent. on silver fox pelts, as "unprecedented, unwarranted, and a detriment to the industry in the States, as well as Canada." A few "selfish ranchers in the States who had great political influence" caused Congress to legislate the duty, he said. The result, as Mr. McClure pictured it, was that the prices of Canadian furs became so prohibitive by the time they reached the United States markets that the retail demand was seriously affected.
Dr. D. B. Armstrong of Watertown, N. Y., one of the principal fox ranchers in the States, expressed a conviction that it would be next to impossible to influence Congress to abolish the duty. He said he thought that supporters of the fox duties would gain the ear of the Arabian bazaar in Congress and thus frustrate any move to lower or abolish the existing rates.
Louis Edward Rusch of Washington, D. C., President of the Institute, assured the Canadian delegation that the Institute would "co-operate to the full toward establishing the Canadian and American branches of the industry on a second economic basis."
Sessions of the Institute "directors" which had been in progress at the Mount Royal Hotel for three days, concluded Saturday with executive committees and "open meetings" attended by fox men from many cities as well as Dominion Government livestock experts. The directors decided to engage the services of six nationally known judges of foxes who will join the staff that will tour ranches of the continent during the fall and winter, scientifically scoring and charting foxes while their furs are in prime.
George Morrison of Seattle, Wash., who in the last year has traveled 25,000 miles inspecting hundreds of ranches throughout the continent, aroused a heated discussion on the subject of "the transmission of acquired characteristics" when he announced that fifty 80 per cent of the 120,000 so-called silver black foxes in America were tinged with brown at birth or acquired brown pelts after the first year. Mr. Morrison reported that it had been definitely established that this change of pelt color was due to faulty feeding, in many instances, but in the majority of cases to the effect of the sun's violent rays upon the fox's fur which became bleached if the animal was kept out of the shade.
The directors voted to undertake a thorough research with a view to correct these conditions.

PROTESTED THE U. S. DUTY ON SILVER FOX FURS.
Maritime Provincialist at Fox Institute Meeting Held It Was "Unprecedented, Unwarranted and a Detriment to the Industry."
Montreal.—A protest against the United States duty on silver foxes and silver fox furs from Canada was lodged with directors of the American Fox Institute Saturday by Chester S. McClure, of Charlottetown, P. E. I., the dean of fox fur dealers in the Dominion.
Mr. McClure attacked the duty, which the United States fixes at 50 per cent. on silver fox pelts, as "unprecedented, unwarranted, and a detriment to the industry in the States, as well as Canada." A few "selfish ranchers in the States who had great political influence" caused Congress to legislate the duty, he said. The result, as Mr. McClure pictured it, was that the prices of Canadian furs became so prohibitive by the time they reached the United States markets that the retail demand was seriously affected.
Dr. D. B. Armstrong of Watertown, N. Y., one of the principal fox ranchers in the States, expressed a conviction that it would be next to impossible to influence Congress to abolish the duty. He said he thought that supporters of the fox duties would gain the ear of the Arabian bazaar in Congress and thus frustrate any move to lower or abolish the existing rates.
Louis Edward Rusch of Washington, D. C., President of the Institute, assured the Canadian delegation that the Institute would "co-operate to the full toward establishing the Canadian and American branches of the industry on a second economic basis."
Sessions of the Institute "directors" which had been in progress at the Mount Royal Hotel for three days, concluded Saturday with executive committees and "open meetings" attended by fox men from many cities as well as Dominion Government livestock experts. The directors decided to engage the services of six nationally known judges of foxes who will join the staff that will tour ranches of the continent during the fall and winter, scientifically scoring and charting foxes while their furs are in prime.
George Morrison of Seattle, Wash., who in the last year has traveled 25,000 miles inspecting hundreds of ranches throughout the continent, aroused a heated discussion on the subject of "the transmission of acquired characteristics" when he announced that fifty 80 per cent of the 120,000 so-called silver black foxes in America were tinged with brown at birth or acquired brown pelts after the first year. Mr. Morrison reported that it had been definitely established that this change of pelt color was due to faulty feeding, in many instances, but in the majority of cases to the effect of the sun's violent rays upon the fox's fur which became bleached if the animal was kept out of the shade.
The directors voted to undertake a thorough research with a view to correct these conditions.

PROTESTED THE U. S. DUTY ON SILVER FOX FURS.
Maritime Provincialist at Fox Institute Meeting Held It Was "Unprecedented, Unwarranted and a Detriment to the Industry."
Montreal.—A protest against the United States duty on silver foxes and silver fox furs from Canada was lodged with directors of the American Fox Institute Saturday by Chester S. McClure, of Charlottetown, P. E. I., the dean of fox fur dealers in the Dominion.
Mr. McClure attacked the duty, which the United States fixes at 50 per cent. on silver fox pelts, as "unprecedented, unwarranted, and a detriment to the industry in the States, as well as Canada." A few "selfish ranchers in the States who had great political influence" caused Congress to legislate the duty, he said. The result, as Mr. McClure pictured it, was that the prices of Canadian furs became so prohibitive by the time they reached the United States markets that the retail demand was seriously affected.
Dr. D. B. Armstrong of Watertown, N. Y., one of the principal fox ranchers in the States, expressed a conviction that it would be next to impossible to influence Congress to abolish the duty. He said he thought that supporters of the fox duties would gain the ear of the Arabian bazaar in Congress and thus frustrate any move to lower or abolish the existing rates.
Louis Edward Rusch of Washington, D. C., President of the Institute, assured the Canadian delegation that the Institute would "co-operate to the full toward establishing the Canadian and American branches of the industry on a second economic basis."
Sessions of the Institute "directors" which had been in progress at the Mount Royal Hotel for three days, concluded Saturday with executive committees and "open meetings" attended by fox men from many cities as well as Dominion Government livestock experts. The directors decided to engage the services of six nationally known judges of foxes who will join the staff that will tour ranches of the continent during the fall and winter, scientifically scoring and charting foxes while their furs are in prime.
George Morrison of Seattle, Wash., who in the last year has traveled 25,000 miles inspecting hundreds of ranches throughout the continent, aroused a heated discussion on the subject of "the transmission of acquired characteristics" when he announced that fifty 80 per cent of the 120,000 so-called silver black foxes in America were tinged with brown at birth or acquired brown pelts after the first year. Mr. Morrison reported that it had been definitely established that this change of pelt color was due to faulty feeding, in many instances, but in the majority of cases to the effect of the sun's violent rays upon the fox's fur which became bleached if the animal was kept out of the shade.
The directors voted to undertake a thorough research with a view to correct these conditions.

PROTESTED THE U. S. DUTY ON SILVER FOX FURS.
Maritime Provincialist at Fox Institute Meeting Held It Was "Unprecedented, Unwarranted and a Detriment to the Industry."
Montreal.—A protest against the United States duty on silver foxes and silver fox furs from Canada was lodged with directors of the American Fox Institute Saturday by Chester S. McClure, of Charlottetown, P. E. I., the dean of fox fur dealers in the Dominion.
Mr. McClure attacked the duty, which the United States fixes at 50 per cent. on silver fox pelts, as "unprecedented, unwarranted, and a detriment to the industry in the States, as well as Canada." A few "selfish ranchers in the States who had great political influence" caused Congress to legislate the duty, he said. The result, as Mr. McClure pictured it, was that the prices of Canadian furs became so prohibitive by the time they reached the United States markets that the retail demand was seriously affected.
Dr. D. B.