The End of the World. BY GARRIE V. SHAW.

If such a thing could be that the wind's low upon me for the first time as I'm sitting here alone!

Oh! I journey me through darksome swamps where cypress leaves lie strown; I could cross black gulches, though jutting rocks let fast all bleeding, torn;

Oh, shall I tell him how my nature, strange, the world had never known? And, misjudged by those I loved, how I might slaver and slave, and haughty, that I reaped not as I had sown.

I shall stand alone reclining 'gainst this piece of marble stone. With the wreck of falling worlds about my helpless feet I lie; The heart's with tumult bleeding the chill wind's shall watch a-d-wait, as I have watched and waited, all alone.

A True Conviction. We advise the committee which has undertaken the duty of convoking the Convention to be held, and not far to follow the highway to freedom traced out for them by the constitution of the Irish Parliament.

Let them reject any new-fangled scheme which would evade the great principles of representation sanctioned by the constitution of that Assembly. It may not be difficult to gather together three hundred men, but three hundred men are here only a mob, if they are not representatives of the country.

Our views with regard to this question have already been placed before the country, at some length, and we believe them correctly to interpret the people's wish. No demur has been made to them, except as to a mere technical point, and even then the desirability of decentralisation was confessed.

It is true, the Convention cannot assume the place of a Legislative Chamber, but when the opinion of the Commons of Ireland is required, care should be taken that the organ created to pronounce it shall interpret it as perfectly as possible. The human intellect has, as yet, found nothing better than elected assemblies, whose members represent the inhabitants of the several chief districts into which the country is divided.

At this moment, then, it is peculiarly interesting to examine the report of the Committee of the National Association "to whom it was referred to suggest a proposal... for the reconstruction of the House of Commons of Ireland." It is not, we hope, too much to expect that it may be accepted as a guide, and as a model, by the committee appointed to draw up a plan for the calling together of a Representative Convention.

At the outset, the Report reminded the public that the House of Commons, before the Union, consisted of 300 county constituencies; of whom 64 were returned by the University of Dublin, and the remaining 234 by the cities, towns, and boroughs.

Wit and Humor. A miss-take—Marriage. Debt-riental—Bankruptcy.

A nice little boy calls himself compass because he is boxed so often. THE VALUE OF HEALTH.—A good constitution is like a money box—the full value of it is never probably known until it is broken.

A JUVENILE AGRARIAN FEAT.—Grandpa—"What on earth is the matter with you, Tommy? You have been crying all the morning." Tommy—"Tommy—"So would you cry too, grandpa, if you fell down twice without getting up once!"

A SCOTCH WITNESS somewhat given to pro-variation was severely handled by a cross-examining counsel. "How far is it between the two farms?" said the counsel. "By the road it's two miles." "Yes, but on your oath, how far is it as the crow flies?" "A dinnan ken; I never was a crow."

A lady residing near little Britain, Lan-caster county, received, several years ago, among her wedding presents a piano, and not having received a musical education thought it best to put the article to a practical use, so, after doing service in the kitchen, it now stands in the spring-house, and the children are entertained by pounding on the keys on one side while she prints the butter on the other side, and the music (?) attracts the cows in from the field to be milked.

THE AUCTION.—At an auction at Cork, the following lots were put up for sale: One pewter and three tinlids; a bell-mouthed chaff sieve, and a cantinaw hog trough; a buckskin warming-pan, and a pewter looking-glass; a japane cleaning beetle, a leather mat-lock, three silk hog's yokes, and a pinch-brook swill-tub; four sheepskin milk pails, a lambskin gridstone, a canvas gridiron, a dimity coal scuttle, a wooden timber chain, and a brass cart rope.

THE SURE REASON.—It has been noticed that executors in England are invariably volunteers from the craft of shoemakers. This is not so very astonishing when it is remembered that cobblers would naturally have a professional partiality for people who decided "to die in their boots!"
