BANK OF MONTREAL.

SEVENTY-FOURTH ANNUAL MEETING

Sir Donald A. Smith Speaks in Favor of Direct Taxation—Contents of the Amendment to the City Charter.

The seventy-fourth annual meeting of the shareholders of the Bank of Montreal was held at one o'clock Monday noon in the Board room of the Bank.

Mr. John Crawford said he didn't see there was much to say regarding the report. It was of the ordinary routine character.

THE PUBLIC WERE ASSURED OF THE SOLIDITY OF THAT INSTITUTION.

The public were assured of the solidity of that institution. He proceeded to compare the present position of the Bank with that of its early years.

Parnell's Brother in New York.

The New York Herald says that—John H. Parnell, brother of Ireland's dead leader, Charles Stewart Parnell, was a saloon passenger on the White Star Steamship Fontonic.

Mr. Parnell's coming was not generally known to the supporters of Ireland's cause and there were few to meet him at the pier. He was in excellent health and spirits.

"I have come over," said Mr. Parnell, "to look after my fruit farms in Georgia and Alabama, and then to go home to Atlanta, Georgia, to look after my business there."

Mr. Parnell said that his mother, Mrs. Parnell, was in good health. Her trip to Ireland did her good. She is on her way to New York to the Sevia, with her mother, Miss Dickinson. She expects to return to Ireland next September.

"As to Irish political affairs," said Mr. Parnell, "I can only say that our party is the party of the people, despite the fact that the clergy are against us. The Healyites are now with us, but I think the present state of affairs will soon change for the better."

At the Cork railway station, on the arrival of Mr. Parnell's train, he was given an enthusiastic reception by the Mayor, Board of Aldermen and 25,000 citizens.

As he was leaving Queenstown he was presented with a "hurling man," a large emblem, by the Richmond Independent Hurling Club, as a souvenir of his visit to Cork.

Mr. Parnell will remain in New York until his mother arrives.
