

Night School—Accepts—The "Plucky Class"—In Charge of Indian Boys at Hampton—The Call from Tuskegee for Some One to Start a Normal School—Gen. Armstrong Recommends the Author—Author Accepts and Proceeds to Tuskegee.

CHAPTER V.

THE BEGINNING OF THE WORK AT TUSKEGEE.

Author's Difficulty in Locating the Town of Tuskegee Before Starting Thither—Description and Some Early History of Tuskegee by Maj. W. W. Screws—Author's Meeting with Mr. Lewis Adams, Who First Advanced the Idea of a Normal School at Tuskegee—How Mr. Adams Secured the First Appropriation Through Hons. A. L. Brooks and W. F. Foster—The Opening of the Normal School, July 4, 1881—The House in which the School Was Started.

CHAPTER VI.

THE FIRST YEAR AT TUSKEGEE.

The Necessity for a Permanent Location for the School Early Seen by the Author—Objections of the Early Students to Manual Labor—Gen. Marshall, Treasurer at Hampton, Lends $500 with which the Present Site of Tuskegee Was Purchased—The Coming of Miss Olivia A. Davidson and Her Valuable Service to the School in Its Early Struggles—The Struggle for Money—Generosity of Both White and Colored Citizens of Tuskegee Towards the Institute—Miss Davidson Goes to Boston in the Interest of the School and Secures Money for the Erection of Porter Hall—More About the Shanty in which the School Was Started and Taught for the First Year—Author is Married to Miss Fannie N. Smith of Malden—Birth of Daughter Portia, and the Mother's Early Death.