d any failed ld be as they ement, whole

That rg was is well ound at reeks in e weeks had not there by e would Letter-: arrival to have fremont's tely, his e) or at the hart get to ld, in all ; which uisbourg. arrive at intention cafonably to their contrary a Entertan either The writer of the Briffol letter indeed obferves, "That our operations against Cape Bre-"ton should begin with the Spring;" but allowing that to be the most advantageous time; yet if Mr. Holbourn had arrived at Halifax by the beginning of May, or even three weeks later, the conquest of Louisbourg might have been very easily made this year.

The two most essential points in this case are, ist. That the Troops employed upon this fervice should be strong enough to keep the Field against Succours, that may be thrown into Louisbourg during the siege, and to repulse any Parties of the enemy in their fallies from the town, adly. That they should be landed upon the Mand in time to go through the necessary Operations for the reduction of Louisbourg before the winter sets in; which it does not generally, till about the beginning of November.

Now both these points would have been secured, if Mr. Holbourn's Squadron had arrived at Halifax by the time, it might have reasonably been expected to have done, and the General had got there in due scason.

As to the first; the forces intended to have been landed upon the island were 11,000 Regular Troops; which would doubtless have been strong enough to have carried on their works against the besieged, and kept themselves Masters of the Field.

В

And

The