

has not been made of them." This is true, though necessarily to a limited extent, of our own Judges, and perhaps some day some industrious member of our profession who can discreetly choose out the gems will do a similar work in this country.

We have nothing but praise for this most interesting collection. It is good reading, and every page is luminous with words of wisdom and practical common sense on subjects interesting not merely to the lawyer, but to any one who claims a liberal education. We can well recommend our readers to expend the small sum that is necessary in that respect.

The Yearly Digest of reported cases decided in the Supreme and other Courts in England. by G. R. HULL, M.A. London: Butterworth & Co., 12 Bell Yard, Law Publishers, 1904.

This collection of cases taken from a variety of sources includes a copious selection of those decided in the Irish and Scotch Courts, together with lists of cases overruled, considered, etc., and of statutes, orders, rules, etc., referred to. The plan of the volume is the same as in former years.

A Concordance of the Railway Act, 1903, compiled by J. E. W. CURRIER, of the Department of Railways and Canals, Ottawa, 1904.

A useful help to those who may have business before the Railway Commission as well as the many others who are brought in contract with railway litigation and legislation.

Bench and Bar. A portrait gallery of members of the Ontario profession. Toronto: C. W. Benedict, 43 Scott St., 1905.

The publisher is producing a very interesting volume of portraits comprising all the past and present judges of the Province of Ontario with many of the Bar of to-day; numbering in all over 500. The "copper process" engravings used in the work give results of the best quality. Each engraving occupies a full page. The album contains the names of the representatives under the engravings, but no biographical notice is given. It is bound in full leather. This collection will be of great historical value in the future, as well as of present interest to the profession and their friends.

May we venture to congratulate the public on the highly creditable appearance of these members of the long-robed profession. They ought to be proud of them, and only too glad to pay their moderate and well earned fees. We certainly congratulate the publisher in the excellent work he is doing in reproducing these worthies.
