In one model there is a snug slip of black charmeuse to preserve the depth of tone. Over this is draped a high girdle of point d'esprit which is softly crushed about the figure. Shoulder caps slightly flared are laid over the soft net sleeves. A tiny ruffle of point d'esprit, point edged, runs over the shoulders and softens the lines of the square decolette.

Pongee in High Favor.

Pongee is in high favor for luncheon gowns because the texture of this fabric especially in its natural tone always suggests coolness. The soft tan of natural pongee makes the perfect background for embroidery in dull blue, rose or red. Emerald green is also smartly effective in contrast with this putty shade.

Black net and point desprit are with this putty shade.

Filack net and point Yesprit are producing spritely dinner gowns which are particularly youthful. A vivid ribbon or sometimes two bright shades are frequently used to span the waist-line and give a sparkle of color to these charming black dresses.

A morning dress that displays the attraction of a Russian blouse is developed in white linen of the close texture called the French weave. The blouse is made with a long-skirted peplum which falls over a knife-pleated skirt of linen. This pleating preserves the narrow silhouette and gives free stride to the wearer in any sport, such as color.

A large crowd of young people enjoyed themselves very much last evening at the dance in the Springbank Pavilion, given under the angles of the Janey Canuck Chapter, L. O. D. E. The dance was quite an inforal affair, and dance music was provided by the Ernest Cortese Orchestra. The patrons and patronesses were Mr. and Mrs. A. Emiller, Mr. and Mrs. F. W. D. Jarvis, and Miss Carrie Fitchett and Mrs. Egelton were in charge of the arrangements.

Golden Text—In nothing be anxious; but in everything, by prayer and supplication with thanksgiving, let your requests be made known unto God.—Phil. 4:6.

LIVE THE LIFE OF VICTORY.
I ask you to memorize our text, inscribe it upon your soul, so you will never forget it. It is more precious than rubles; to practice its exalted teaching is to have victory over all our enemies. It is, in fact, the only way to live the victorious life, to insist upon not being anxious, and to have the habit of taking everything to God.—Phil. 4:6.

produces the smartly picturesque alternoon dress which is worn with a broad hat of black straw faced with black satin. The blouse of this gown is trimmed with tucked triangles of black organdie and black lace insertion. The square "Charles" collar is edged with lace insertion. The gradie is a crushed line of black charmeuse that ends in two long streamers weighted with heavy jet tassels.

The full tunic of black organdie is bordered with triangles if tucked organdie, outlined with black lace and set between rows of lace insertion. The petticoat of white net profusely ruffled is a striking feature of this frock which is both dainty and cool.

In the twilight and evening hours a dress of black point of d'esprit makes a charming choice for a dinner gown.

Panelled Overskirt.

The interesting feature of this gown is found in a panelled overskirt which shortens in the front and back to the depth of two picot edged ruffles and lengthens at the side into two panels which reach nearly to the end of the skirt. The two ruffles of peint d'esprit run round and round this unusual overskirt and give an effect of lovely lightness to the costume, which is extremely picturesque and may be found very serviceable on account of the durability of both its material and color.

An oriental turban of black tulls makes an attractive evening hat for wear with this gown. It is "wrapped" around the rolled brim and carries no trimming except two graceful sweeps of black paradise.

In the sheerness of this gown and hat lies their greatest charm. In spite of great coolness.
