VENDRIES, FAMOUS FRENCH AVIATOR, KILLED IN FALL

Paris, April 21.—(Havas)—It was announced at Villacoublay this afternoon that Aviator Jules Vendries had fallen about 10.30 o'clock at a place called Les Foulloz, near the town of St. Rambert-d'Albon, in the department of Drôme, on the Rhone river, south of Lyons. Vendries and his mechanic were killed and the machine was smashed to pieces. Vendries left Villacoublay with the intention of making a non-stop flight to Rome. The airplane he used was built to bombard Berlin and weighed five and a half tons. He had a strong wind at his back when he left Villacoublay at 8.30 a.m.

It is believed the accident was due to the machine collapsing in the air. The aviator fell from a great height and the death of both of them was instantaneous. The mail sack which Vendries was carrying to Rome was found among the debris of the machine.

Vendries was always a partisan of speed. He was the first man to fly more than 125 miles an hour. He was a thorough patriot and refused a three million franc engagement several years ago to act as director of a German aviation school.

W. A. Kingsland, assistant general manager of C. G. R., announced that the line between Falmouth Junction and Truro (113 miles) will be double-tracked this summer.

A New Meaning.

A British officer who has just returned from German East Africa tells an amusing story of Askari recruits whom he was training. Mistakes in the drill were frequent, and, in consequence, "As you were" became an order rapped out with increasing severity of expression.

Later the officer overheard a conversation between two natives in the squad. "What does our officer mean by 'As you were'?" inquired one Askari. "'Asweret,'" replied the other, "is a word the Englishman has invented for when he wants to say 'I am sorry, I have made a mistake.'"

Sixty boys enjoyed three industrial explanatory trips arranged by the Y. M. C. A. yesterday morning. A. M. Gregg conducted the largest party, which visited the sugar refineries; Andrew Malcolm took the boys to the cotton mills, and Robert Somerville had charge of a group that saw the New Brunswick Telephone Company's operating rooms.
