QUEEN MARY'S CHARITIES

Alexandra's Wonderful Vitality
Astounds Her Friends—Canadians in London—Their Taxes

(Times' Special Correspondence)
London, Aug. 13.—Although one would hardly call Queen Mary a sentimental woman, she is capable of great kindness and thoughtfulness. The writer has just learned of a little series of acts done almost in a secret way, at any rate, without any of the publicity and ostentation that are the worst features of the public activities of most royal women.

A short time ago an old and faithful servant of the queen's was ordered to a hospital by the doctor. Queen Mary, however, refused to allow her to go to one of the London hospitals, despite the fact that patients have there the best of treatment and attention. Instead, the queen paid the fees of a private nursing home for her servant. Nor did her kindness end there. Busy as she is with public engagements, the queen found time to visit her old servant daily and personally see that she was well looked after.

Recently, at the queen's instigation, a large house, owned by the Crown, was set apart for the use of old royal servants who had retired because of old age. The queen, a few days ago, told a personal friend that she had seldom spent happier days than those devoted to a personal supervision of the furnishings and decorations of this house.

Many society women signed over and enjoyed Queen Alexandra, her wonderful constitution, as they drove away from the two garden parties that she gave recently at Marlborough House. Most women of her age—even when their lives have been of the serene—were past standing for hours together, shaking hands with several hundred people, and not collapsing afterwards. For these occasions she donned her widow's cap and donned a small, but becoming straw hat, and a beautiful rope of pearls hung round her neck.

Two charities, the Queen Victoria's Jubilee Nurses' Institute and the Red Cross Society, in which she is much interested, gave her an excuse for these parties, but those who attended them were not there to emerge, butterfly-like, from the cocoon of mourning in which she has hidden herself since the death of King Edward and to start a new life.

Many of Queen Alexandra's guests took the opportunity of going through some of the rooms at Marlborough House, her lord, a room rarely entered except by her most intimate friends, being open for the occasion. This room is a mine of interesting things of all kinds. In one corner is a book-case containing all the books used by the queen herself. Round the wall at a convenient height, is a narrow case covered with plate glass, for her jewels and her fans. This enables her majesty to decide for herself what jewels or fan she will wear with the dress she is putting on. It was made originally for the dressing-room they would have seen there most ingenious pieces of furniture designed by the queen herself. Had they ascended to her majesty's dressing-room they would have seen there most ingenious pieces of furniture designed by the queen herself. It is not always remembered that the beautiful Viscountess Tiverton, who is being congratulated by her many friends on her recovery from appendicitis, is a Canadian. She is the only daughter of Lady Duff-Gordon by her first marriage and is married to Lord Halsey's son. Her aunt, Mrs. Clayton Glynn—Elmer Glynn, whose pen has long been in the "Times," is from Canada and signalled her arrival by another of her "modern" stories. A Canadian who was up there last September, from Canada and even those who are here for a season and take a town or country house are equally concerned with permanent Canadian representatives in coming under the unwelcome attention of the income tax gatherer, and have been active in efforts to get the question ventilated.

"Should Canadian representatives whose work lies in Great Britain pay taxes, while foreign representatives remain untaxed?" is a question which will be shortly brought to the attention of parliament. Coming from a country which is so moderately taxed, Canadians feel the hardship of the excessive taxes here more than the native who has become gradually accustomed to these depletions of his purse. Under the international law representatives of foreign states are exempt from taxation as well as from the operation of the law. No foreign representative or any member of his retinue can be arrested and embassies offer sanctuary quite as potent as in the old days, when the church extended safe refuge. The Colonial Secretary has been approached but points out that as British subjects Canadian representatives must pay taxes. However the matter will not rest at this point and a member at Westminster prominent for his interest in imperial matters intends to put a question on the subject. It is pointed out that the representative of an obscure South American Republic enjoys privileges far precluded, and an effort will be made to redress the inequality.

JOHN T. HAWKES'S

EVIDENCE IN THE
I. C. R. PASS INQUIRY

At the afternoon session of the pass inquiry in Montreal yesterday John T. Hawkes, of the Montreal Transcript, testified on the stand. Witness admitted that Duncan McKinnon an I. C. R. employee had been employed in the construction of the Transcript building. His wages had been paid to him by the witness. McKinnon had got leave of absence from the I. C. R. Mr. Hawkes stated that he had heard that Dr. Murray had given money to leave town, but did not know it for a fact. He, witness, had never given any money.

When the book used in the Transcript office for I. C. R. printing was produced, Mr. Fowler remarked: "I suppose you have closed that account."

"Yes," replied the witness, "but we expect to open it again next year."

In reply to further questions from Mr. Fowler, the witness said he had spoken to Elmer Ferguson about the pass matter on two or three occasions prior to Nov. 12 or 13, 1909, when Ferguson made his confession to Mr. Hawkes, but up till the 12th or 13th Ferguson emphatically denied having anything to do with the matter, but on that day Ferguson came into the witness's office while Officer Lingey was there and started to give his statement. Lingey left the room and as he was going remarked to Ferguson: "You had better tell that man (meaning Hawkes) the truth."

Witness said he had given his opinion to one of the directors of the Eastern Press Association, that in his opinion Ferguson was not a proper person to occupy his present position in connection with that body. Ferguson prepares the despatches sent out by the Canadian Press from Montreal to the afternoon papers. Before leaving the stand, witness stated that so far as he had been personally concerned he had been treated fairly at the enquiry.

The Harvesters

Among those who left the city on the harvesters' excursion are two pairs of lovers. One is from P. E. Island and the other from Amherst. It is said that both the girl runaways are under age. In an endeavor to stop the elopers, the local police had been communicated with, but no trace of them could be found among the harvesters.

The mother of four children, who was going west on the harvesters' excursion on Monday evening became separated from them during the night, and while hunting for them around the depot, allowed four trains to leave. It was only ten minutes before the last train was leaving that she heard of her family having gone on the third train, two hours before. A message was telegraphed to Montreal to detain the family there.

John Quinn, a Prince Edward Islander who started from St. John on Monday with the harvesters' excursion, narrowly escaped death when he fell from the moving train. Sectionmen found him lying on the track at Ruth, a small station near Welsford, in an unconscious condition. Quinn is said to have been celebrating and is supposed to have fallen from the car platform while asleep. He was brought to the city and other than being somewhat stiff was none the worse for his experience. He went forward last night.

They had motored over together from Langton to spend the day. Vancouver, B. C., Aug. 13.—Police Sergeant William Stanton, of New Westminster, acting chief during the absence of Chief Bradshaw, who went to Los Angeles after the alleged bank robber Dean, has disappeared. Last Thursday night he walked out of the station and since then has not been seen. Stanton was a steady man and the officials can give no reason for his disappearance.

Killarney, Man., Aug. 13.—The body of W. R. Upton, a prominent farmer, was found in his home yesterday. He had died July 25, and his brother, Edmund, concealed the death, declaring his belief that he would be resurrected. A coroner's jury decided death was natural and recommended that the brother be confined in an asylum.

THE DETROIT ALDERMEN

Detroit, Mich., Aug. 13.—Municipalities mingled with chests and counter charges, were heaped upon Edward Schreier, deposed clerk of the common council committee, by the accused officials when Schreier appeared in the police court today with eighteen aldermen for arraignment on bribery charges in connection with the Washab street closing deal. Schreier's confession involving himself and the aldermen, now under arrest, was the principal topic of conversation around the court room.

Each of the eighteen aldermen declared that Schreier's confession was false. Prosecuting Attorney Hugh J. Shepherd announced this afternoon that Edward Schreier, deposed council committee clerk, who made a complete confession after his arrest with eighteen aldermen in connection with bribery charges, will from now on assist him in prosecuting the aldermen. "Schreier is now an attaché of the prosecution office. You might call him an assistant without pay," said the prosecutor.

Assistant Prosecutor Charles Inowolski said today that aldermen Theo. C. Cline, leader of the common council, and who is said to have received $1,000 bribe money from a detective in the Washab street closing case, has repeatedly confessed his confession, alleged to have been made to Detective Wm. J. Burns that Cline's statements agree with Schreier's in every detail.

JUST THE MAN

Glady: "The man who wins my admiration must be one who can stand firm in his convictions in the face of ridicule and personal danger." Charles: "Then I fill the experience." Glady: "Can you prove it?" Charles: "Yes, I'm a bar."
