

THE CHRISTIAN WATCHMAN

A Prayer for Light.

O watchman will the night of sin
Be never past?
O watchman, doth the day begin
To dawn upon thy straining sight at last?
Will it dispel
Ere long the mists of sense wherein I dwell?
Now all the earth is bright and glad
With the fresh dawn;
But all my heart is cold, and dark, and sad;
Sun of the soul, let me behold thy dawn!
Come Jesus, Lord!
Oh, quickly come, according to thy word!

Do we not live in those blest days
So long foretold, (grace?)
When 'Thou shouldst come to bring us light and
And yet I sit in darkness as of old,
Pining to see
Thy glory; but thou still art far from me.
If thus in darkness ever left,
Can I fulfil
The works of light, while of all light bereft?
How shall I learn in love and meekness still
To follow Thee,
And all the shafts of works of darkness flee?
The light of reason cannot give
Life to my soul,
Jesus alone can make me truly live,
One glance of his can make my spirit whole.
On this poor longing, waiting heart of mine!
Single and clear, not weak or blind,
The eye must be
To which thy glory shall an entrance find;
For if thy chosen ones would gaze on Thee,
No earthly screen
Between their souls and Thine must intervene.
Jeans, do Thou mine eyes unseal,
And let them grow
Quick to discern what'er Thou dost reveal,
So shall I be deliver'd from that woe,
Blindly to stray
Through hopeless night, while all around is day.

The Firebrand.

ANDY O'HARA.

BY THE AUTHOR OF THE MISSIONARY'S SON.
CHAPTER VI.
THE BREAK UP.
For three years had Andy worked for his daily bread in F. His industry, zeal, honesty and ability had won for him the regard of all who knew him, and gained the love of his employer. He had now arrived at a point where the current of his life was to take a turn and flow onward more gradually, more deeply.

Could you have looked into the mind of this poor Irish lad you would have seen thoughts there of great evidence of a high spirit and a lofty genius; for now, among his oxen and wagons, his mills and logs, there came a still, small voice breathing to his heart the last command of his Saviour: "Go ye into all the world, and preach the Gospel to every creature." In his heart, too, there came up a solemn reflection: "Woe is me, if I preach not the Gospel." But who was he, this illiterate peasant lad, this poor day-laborer, that he should preach?

Once there lived in England a poor shoemaker of the lowest class. He became very pious. While patching boots he conceived the frantic project of converting India. He thought over it in his old shoe-shop, and then his prayers went up for help from God on this enterprise. And this man went to India. He toiled hard. He accomplished an apostolic work. The world honored him at last, and now we look back and see in this poor cobbler, meditating over a moral's conversion, a magnificent apostle of a world's sublimity.

Of this class was Andy. He, too, meditated over a world's conversion. The love which he felt for his Saviour would not permit him to pass his life in driving oxen. In his holy zeal and sacred ambition he would contend himself with nothing less than preaching the everlasting Gospel. It was not self-conceit, for Andy was truly humble; nor was it a desire for worldly advancement, for he never thought of this. It was a sincere love for souls, and a longing to do something for his Saviour.

Still he did not look upon this subject rashly. He had shrewd and correct views of his duty. He well knew his own ignorance, and his utter incapacity, under present circumstances, to become a teacher to those who were far wiser than himself. If he were to preach he would prepare himself for it. He was only eighteen years old. He would give ten or twelve years of his life to prepare for this glorious work.

Here then Andy had arrived. Sitting among his oxen, he meditates over a preparation for the ministry. He thinks over the various ways of getting the education which he wishes; he prays to God to open a way.

All his earnings he had carefully hoarded up, but not for himself. Every cent that he saved he had sent to his dear mother, with the hope that these cents would at last accumulate sufficiently to bring them all out to this blessed America. So he had no money of his own even to take him through the first steps. But he saw that this could be overcome if it were the will of Providence for him to be a minister.

made he knew that he would have to spend three years at least in a preparatory course, and then four years in the college. He knew that the confinement of study would be irksome, and close attention to books painful in the extreme to one like him. Yet he was not daunted. He expected if he went it would work harder than ever he had worked before; to confine him, self closely and devote himself to one great end. He believed that he would grow fond of the work at last, and even thus get his reward. He expected to suffer much from the extreme of poverty; to deny himself of food and clothing, to put up with the scorn of his superiors, to be laughed at and despised. But he thought he could bear all for Christ's sake.

And now he waited for some opening which he could consider providential. He waited for some way which might open to him the object of his desires. He did not wish to tell Mr. Truman of his thoughts as yet until he had fully determined what to do. When his mind was completely made up, and all his purposes complete, then he would acquaint him with his intention. The time was now rapidly approaching when the new college term opened, so Andy would have to decide speedily. But now Andy found himself forced to decide.

Mr. Truman had largely engaged in the lumber trade this year. He had believed in common with all the other people of F., that it would be a very prosperous year for his branch of commerce and so he had thrown all his resources into this year's operations. But scarcely had he involved himself beyond hope of extraction when the storm arose. At first the cloud appeared no larger than a man's hand; it increased rapidly, and finally the tempest burst around. The prices of lumber went down to nothing, and all who had speculated in wood lost terribly. Mr. Truman was among the heaviest sufferers. For some time he struggled against adverse circumstances, for some time he succeeded in keeping his feet; but at length he could struggle no longer; he yielded to the storm; he fell and was ruined utterly. At this time he sent for Andy.

"Well, Andy, my boy," said he, "you've known for some time that I couldn't keep up. The last of it has come and I am ruined. Andy sobbed and could not speak. "It is not now sorrowing after, Andy," said Mr. Truman kindly; "I knew your warm and faithful heart; but do not grieve. Thank heaven, all my debts are paid. I only am ruined."

"An' sure it's hard, it's hard!" murmured Andy. "No, no, Andy. I never cared for riches—this is no blow to me. I had a blow once which was indeed hard. Had she been living now I might have felt keenly. But I can easily resign myself to the will of God."

"O Mister Truman! can I ever be like you?" "Ah, Andy, you'll learn some day that it is easy to bear a loss when it cannot grieve you, or interfere with your true happiness. But in this one thing which concerns you, and on this account I am sad."

"Me?" said Andy wonderingly. "Yes," said Mr. Truman with a smile. "I have long known your secret desires. I have fathomed your thoughts, and have learned all your wishes from many things. I looked upon you, Andy as a child of providence, and I considered this desire of yours as one which should be cherished. I had therefore resolved, when you had decided on your course to send you to the W. Institute."

"What?" cried Andy in deep amazement. Mr. Truman smiled kindly at Andy. "At this new instance of the generosity of his friend Andy was strangely moved. To him thus far he had owed everything, and now he saw his latest evidence of his goodness. It overpowered him. His warm grateful feelings could not find utterance. He only gazed at Mr. Truman's hands in silence, and could not speak.
