— A strange story comes from Krasna in Russia. A man named Leelie, descend ant of an Englishman, the family of the Lords Leelie, who settled in Rassia in the sixteenth century, lately received notice that the elder branch of the family had become extinct and that he was the heir to a fortune of £10,000,000 and a perage. Mr. Leslie does not desire to sit in the House of Lords and would prefer to realize the fortune and continue to reside in Russia. —The Paris Figaro says that Crown Prince Frederick William of Germany recently visited the Come de Paris to tell him that the formation of a Floquei-Boulager Ministry would be followed within a month by a war betseen France and Germany. The Figaro say, freiher that the policy of the monarchical party will be based on this warning. The rovalists need little urging to sustain the present Ministry, and if they did it is not by any means critical that the prospects of a war with G ranany sould affect them that way. Toere are many who think that the blunders of the republicane at the beginning of such a war would cause the people to turn toward the monarcony as the nation's only salvation.
