Bonnet Hop.

This is a decided novelty in St. John when new evening dresses are considered in bad taste and those of 1914 look pre-historic. The absence of formality gives a sociable air and with the proceeds going for patriotic funds, dancing could be indulged in with a free conscience.

Many yards of bunting and the really artistic maple leaf decorations formed of apples left from the apple show were used in last night's entertainment.

This bonnet hop was held in St. Andrew's rink under the auspices of the Royal Standard, I. O. D. E. Ice cream was for sale and the booth was well patronized during the evening. Music was furnished by the 165th band who gave an excellent programme of dances. Mrs. George Mc-Avity and Mrs. T. E. G. Armstrong acted as reception committee and a large number enjoyed the hospitality of the Royal Standard Chapter, I. O. D. E.

FROM "EVE FOREVER."

If I had been asked whether Asquith would ever change his mind about women suffrage, I should have said, "Never." I should have laid all my money on his resistance, and I should have lost it. The war has proved that Eve is as good a citizen as Adam, and that Adam cannot win it without Eve. Mr. Asquith, as soon as Eve trooped into the war-workshops in hundreds of thousands, doing Adam's work for Adam's pay, hauled down his flag. And Eve will get the vote.

The war has brought Eve into her kingdom both as a mother and as a man. When I call Eve a man I mean what I say. The only thing that puzzles me is to find out anything she cannot do. She can drive a motor-ambulance and she can run a great military hospital. She can turn herself into a surgeon and operate as skillfully as any man. She can make big shells. She can direct great businesses. I believe she could fight, if we allowed her to fight, as many women in the Russian army are fighting.

Her only limitation is her physical strength, and there are many women strong enough to beat their husbands physically as well as intellectually. There is no use in denying that men are afraid of Eve, with her brains, her industry, her sobriety, her honesty, and her perseverance. As a rival in any trade or profession she is by no means despicable. Eve is making the old Adam sit up. Her efficiency terrifies him. After the war Adam will be forced to wake up and work hard in order to keep abreast of Eve.—James Douglas in London Opinion.

Have the courage to appear poor, and you disarm poverty of its sharp sting.—Mrs. Jameson.

THE Battle OF THE Somme

"THE GREATEST

At a signal, along 16-mile front, the British leaped from their trenches.

It was the morning of July 1st, 1916, destined to be one of the outstanding dates in British history. All was ready after two years of planning and preparing. Kitchener's army, ready at last to be loosed like a flood, was awaiting the hour. The hour and the minute have been named in the orders, that moment when the Teutons were to lose their initiative in the great war. A lieutenant looks at his wrist watch. The moment has nearly come. He looks again. It has come.

He leaps to the parapet and the others follow on the instant. Two are hit and fall back into the trench, their faces against the earthy wall. The others dash on to the German wire. And the eye of the moving camera permanently records it all. You may see the picture at the Imperial Theatre next week.

SCOUT NEWS.

A Useful Troop.

A London, England troop lately volunteered for the duty of conducting a party of 300 Serbian boys, on a visit to the metropolis. The Lord Mayor of London was pleased to have the troop formed up inside the Mansion House, where he carefully examined every boy's badges and at the close of the inspection expressed his keen pleasure at seeing such a fine lot of Scouts. He thanked them for the splendid help they had given him in looking after the Serbian boys. The same day in the crypt of St. Paul's cathedral the Archbishop of Canterbury inspected the boys and gave them a very kindly address, stating that they were representing English boyhood to their Serbian guests, and were offering them a good example of what a boy should be. Mr. Will Crooks later on in the day addressed the troop, saying:

"Scouts—we all love you. You will do anything for us, from calling a taxi to mending a broken leg."

Scout Knew His Duty.

"I want to express my warmest praise of the Boy Scouts of America in general and of one little Boy Scout in particular," writes a New York lady to the editor of the "Times." "Several days ago I fell and injured my foot as I stepped from a shop to the pavement. I was assisted by the men inside and placed on a stool; to my urgent request for a taxicab they replied that I would soon be all right. I was in pain and urged again and again for a taxicab, only to receive the same reply. I was in absolute despair when a little boy rushed in from the street and said: 'I will get you a taxicab.' The boy dashed out again and soon returned with one. I managed to ask him for his address which he scribbled on a card and I thrust it without looking into my bag. A few days later I discovered that my little hero was a Boy Scout. I sent him a note of warmest appreciation and here is his reply, worthy of a true soldier: 'My dear Mrs. Hampton: Helping you last Tuesday was nothing more than my duty as a Scout. We boys are taught to help others at all times and not to think of ourselves till the last. I always try to do my best to live up to my oath which I took in January, 1915.'"

EXTRACTS FROM THE MAIL BAG.

St. Andrews, N. B.

Dear Uncle Dick:—
I thought I would try the Christian Name Contest, because I haven't written to you for a long time, but I have been reading all the letters every Saturday in the Children's Corner.

Your loving niece,
Dorothy Thompson.

Having Picture Taken,
Long Reach, N. B.

Dear Uncle Dick:—
I was very pleased to see my picture in the Corner. I expect to get a picture taken of myself this coming week. I enjoy the Corner very much and I think it is getting much more interesting each time.

Zaldee Gorham was very pleased to see the paper when she got it and she loves to read the Corner each week. We are practising for our Rally Day service in the Methodist church and I have a recitation to say. Well I guess I will have to close.

From your loving niece
Jessie L. McKiel.

Arranging Sewing Circle,
25 King Street.

Dear Uncle Dick:—
I am glad that you answered my letter. I am going to school now, and I like it very well, and I like my teacher. I went to Sunday school Sunday. We are getting up a sewing circle, some girls and I. One of the girl's name is Phyllis King. I have been looking up names. I got 100 names beginning with P. My letter is getting long, so I will close.

From your niece,
Beulah Black.

Likes the Little Stories, Quispamsis.

Dear Uncle Dick:—
I have not written to you for quite a long time, so I thought I would write to you today. I like the little stories in The Standard very much, and also the jokes. I tried the Question Contest and am sending it in to you. I couldn't find the contests in The Standard today, but will look for them Monday. School has started again, and I like my teacher very much. I guess I will close now.

From your loving niece,
Nan Coleman.

Who's Who and What's What in the Picture World and on the Stage—Favorites and What They Say and Do.

OPERA HOUSE.

"The Woman in the Case."

It was a decided treat to see a woman who loved her husband and believed in him in spite of evidence against him. The evidence would, in most cases have quite enough for people in plays to turn against the ones they loved and it was a welcome change. This is the picture in which Pauline Frederick decided that for a change she would like to have the sympathy of the audience with her instead of being a vampire and having the curtain going down upon her, left alone while the hero and his sweet-heart go off rejoicing.

Miss Frederick makes "Margaret Hughes" one of the most appealing and lovable women we have seen for a long time. She wears some very beautiful gowns, and there are many chances for her to display her powers of depicting emotion.

Marie Chambers was a rather unpleasant vampire. The diagraph plays an important part in one scene. Several incidents take place in Paris and there are few glimpses given of the frantic struggle to get away of which Richard Harding Davis wrote so well.

The Flowery Kingdom with its many picturesque people and customs was another good film at the Opera House. This is a Universal picture, and most interesting were the views of Japanese theatres with their chorus so different from ours, and the dancing which might not appeal to the lovers of rag-time.

LYRIC.

"Her American Prince."

Honoraria was the name of the land where the events pictured yesterday at the Lyric took place. It was one of the three kingdoms where plots were the breath of life to the inhabitants thereof, and kings were crowned and uncrowned every day or so. Omri Hawley is the beautiful princess, and there is a brave American who is a great fighter, and rescues the fair damsel by what was really a good piece of bluff. The picture is staged in some fine locations and there is some good riding.

Lemons and his clever canine was the bill of vaudeville at the Lyric. I only saw Lemons. I did not care for some of his jokes, and think that there are much funnier kinds of humor than many of those who give that sort of "comedy chatter" seem to have discovered.

IMPERIAL.

A Prince in a Pawnshop.

I venture to say a pawnshop, such as David Solomon ran, would soon become very popular in the neighborhood. This nice old Jew went about as a sort of fairy godfather (if there is such a thing), and took his pleasure in giving help just where it was most needed. Having seen Barney Bernard in a character full of humor, and a bit of a disappointment to find that this was a more serious picture, though there is no doubt as to the ability possessed by Mr. Bernard to play the part in a convincing manner. Bobby Connelly made a great hit, as he was where he insists upon giving away his knife and everyone knows what a priceless possession a knife is to a small boy. This is the Vitaphone's second picture starring Barney Bernard and the benevolent Jew had the entire sympathy of the large audience from the time he appeared on the stage. It is a good picture, not a sign of murder anywhere.

A travel picture and a fine number of Pathe's British Gazette with many war scenes on the different fronts made up a good programme. Belgian griffins and keepers, a funny little black dog, "All smart," I was told when I asked which was the cleverest of all.

Mr. J. B. Franklin of the Strand Theatre, Halifax, is a visitor in St. John.

HOUSE PETERS and MYRTLE STEDMAN TO CO-STAR.

House Peter who has just become connected with the Oliver Morosco Photoplay Company, and Myrtle Stedman, the pretty screen artist, are to co-star in a forthcoming release on the Paramount Programme under the Morosco trademark. The subject in which these two motion picture favorites will make their debut as co-stars is "The Happiness of Three Women," by Albert Payson Terhune, well-known author of many prominent works including the story upon which the current Lasky release "The Years of the Locust" was based.

"The Happiness of Three Women" created considerable attention when it appeared in "The Red Book" and presents an admirable subject in which to display the talents of the co-stars. As Billy Craig, the young attorney who becomes enmeshed in a mass of complications, House Peters will characterize a part that demands much of his exceptional dramatic finesse. Myrtle Stedman who has just completed her characterization in Lasky's "The Soul of Kura-San," in which she appears in chief support to the noted Japanese actor Sessue Hayakawa, still appears as Constance Barr in the new Morosco photoplay, which to display the talents of the co-

ALICE FAIRWEATHER.
