came to its death through violence and not otherwise."

He then got into communication with Detective Killen, who later called in and took the body to the morgue. The corpse after half an hour's deliberation last night, after hearing five witnesses in the inquest before Coroner Berryman into the death of the infant found in a trunk in the cellar of the house, 19 Horsfield street. They also declared that in their opinion the child had lived, and that had medical aid been accepted by the mother, there was no reason for supposing the child would not have continued to live. As a result of the verdict Coroner Berryman has given instructions to Dr. Warwick not to allow the mother to leave the hospital until further steps are taken by the authorities.

How Body Was Found.

Samuel T. Lewis, in whose house the caused by the pressure on the neck, or child's body was found, said he had hired the Davidson girl early in February. Mrs. Isaacs, his mother-in-law, who was keeping house for him while his wife was absent in Montreal, told him that she had suspicions of the girl's condition. To the Editor of The Telegraph.

Sir,—In the dying hours of the session of the legislature, just closed, a bill was rushed through by the government providing for the construction of certain bridges in the province. One of these was at Mill Settlement, Sunbury county, across the south branch of the Oromocto river, and its erection bears all the earmarks of a barefaced attempt to create political capital in Premier Hazen's constituency. Only a few families are served by the bridge, which will prove a costly structure and for years these people have used another expensive bridge about a mile below for the few weeks in the year when crossing the stream either by fording or by the natural ice bridge is impossible.

The small settlement across the river has a school house of its own, aided by the poor district grant, while practically all attend a church which is quite as conveniently reached by the existing bridge as it will be by the new one.
