WEDNESDAY EVENING, MARCH 24

The Supreme Court Bill.
The bill for the establishment of a Supreme Court of Appeals for Canada has excited much discussion in legal circles in all the Provinces, and grave apprehensions are entertained in the Maritime Provinces regarding its working. The prospect of going to Ottawa to discuss the merits of the bill is not the courts of this Province is not a very inviting one. Hon. Mr. Foran's motion for the second reading of the bill called forth several speeches in opposition to its provisions. The only Mar-time member who spoke on it was Mr.
Palmer, who is thus reported in Hansard:

Mr. Palmer said that the bill was one of very great importance to the whole Dominion. It was stated that it should be framed so as to effectively meet all requirements. He had several serious objections to the bill as drafted. The first to the sixteenth sections provided for the formation of the court, and the second provisions with regard to its appellate jurisdiction, and onwards to the 30th clause were provisions as to the mode of procedure to be followed in the Supreme Court of Appeal, but his opinion was not immediately whatever he may write entirely to matters of appeal and should have no original jurisdiction whatever.
There was one objection to the bill which he would direct attention to the fact that the procedure he suggested would be a simple one given to the opposite party in two different courts with perfect security or other preliminary requirements that might be considered necessary before the right of appeal would attach. One point was lost sight of in the bill which was that the right of appeal should be given to the opposite party in the Supreme Court of Appeal, and the power of Parliament to do so. By section 18 the right of appeal was given when the amount reached $1,000, but this should be altered so as to give the right of appeal to the opposite party in all cases, and also in cases where the importance seemed to demand it.

The Musical Globe, published in New York, is a publication issued in monthly parts, each part containing a variety of parts, with illustrations, and a number of pieces of music. The April number contains a selection of ballads, songs and instrumental pieces, and is very attractive. It is published by T. R.
Sheraton & Co., Princess Street.

The last scene in the drama of Henry and Mary.
The last scene in the drama doubtless found fluttering hearts, not only in the breasts of plaintiff and defendant, but with all the crowd who had gathered to the Hall of Justice in Richmond to see the trial.

A tragedy even with bloodshed, a comedy leaves its heroes happy, but this drama represented the life of the man who neither died, married or happy when at last it came to an end. The addresses of the counsel are said to have been bringing over with eloquence, and the stern master of fact of the law of contract was beautifully interspersed with outbursts of the poetry of passion. The counsel for the defence endeavored to show that Mary's jealousy had caused the disruption of the marriage, and that two or three hundred dollars would amply pay for the laceration of her feelings, the cost of her grey silk dress, and her ticket from Boston to Richmond. But when the plaintiff's counsel rose to plead for weighty damages his tale was one of woman's love and man's perfidy—the old, sad story which all have heard and will hear again.
He attributed the cause of excitement to the fact that the people were there in force; not through idle curiosity, but to assist and uphold his client's righteous cause. He asked the jury to award damages as they would like to have awarded to their sisters or daughters under similar circumstances. He characterized the defendant as the greatest hypocrite that ever came into a court of justice, and wished it was the law of the land that the cause could be tried in a Criminal Court, and O'Leary would then have his deserts. He had destroyed the peace of mind of the plaintiff, and he laughed at his infancy, checked at his perfidy, and cast her off as an old shoe.
Then, to make the assurance sure, he said nearly all the correspondents, and quoted from a letter to the effect that he had maligned his best friends; that even a well known public man, in his official capacity, had not even escaped his jury.
In conclusion, he asked the jury to send the man into his pocket, and teach him, through his purse, what he failed to feel through his conscience.

The Judge, in charging the jury, told them that the law of contract was not others where the law of contract was involved, and that the cruelly cast of Connaught was entitled to damages not only for the loss of a home but as a compensation for her wounded feelings.
In love, the Judge sagely remarked, the woman suffers more from disappointment than man would suffer under the same circumstances. If then, the coy Connaught could be found to have loved the cuddling O'Leary, then the damages ought to be greater than if she were merely actuated by the less sentimental motive of seeking a home.
And here is something for ill tempered maidens to reflect upon.
The Judge told the jury that if the plaintiff exhibited the temper the defendant says she did—by saying that the children could cry till their throats were raw, and get well again, the defendant would be justified in breaking off the match. He thought the plaintiff did not discharge the defendant from the performance of the contract. The proposal came from the defendant to be discharged. He instructed them "not to dive deep into the defendant's pocket," but to be reasonable in their demands. If they thought O'- Leary wanted to get rid of the plaintiff, then the damages should be increased.

He evidently did think so, by the damages they brought in fourteen hundred dollars and one cent. As for O'Leary? That was dear cuddling and kissing, dear letter writing, and dear love in every way. No wonder he called her dear Mary, and well might he exclaim to his cuddled one, "Why wert thou so dear?" Alas for the profits of ships and lobster—all swallowed up in the enormous bill for cuddling, kissing, and talking of marriage. Those who dance must pay the piper; and those who cuddle must pay for the privilege. Such was the fate of O'Leary, and his case will long be remembered as an awful example of what shall be done with cuddlers who back out at the eleventh hour. And the young men and maidens of future generations shall pass in their cuddlings to think of the result should their love prove as changeable as that of the coddling O'Leary and the coy Connaught.

Captain Gill, ex-Deputy Tax Collector of Brooklyn, died Sunday night. He the old brigade in which was the First Massachusetts Regiment.

Two girls attending a seminar in Illinois set two chickens fighting in their room last Sunday. The result was a high, and at the conclusion of the contest the winning maiden was "better" by a gold watch worth $100.00 and a French corset, two English of false hair, a patent bustle, and a beautiful book mark with "Mrs. Gilder" worked on it in colored silk.

At a public spelling match in Indianapolis, given for a charitable purpose, the first person who missed a word was Professor W. A. Bell, editor of the School Journal and formerly Superintendent of the Educational Department of the city.
He spelled "algae" with a "d," and upon his correction he was the recipient of a large cabbage bouquet.

Millionaires are called "rich men" in New York, and none others may except the following. A half millionaire is said to be "well off and independent." A $250,000 man is "very comfortable." Place the figures at $100,000 and the owner is a "small man," under $50,000 he is "poor," while a $25,000 man is such a poor devil, as to be unworthy of mention.

A gentleman in want of a housekeeper tried an old expedient. He sent out two advertisements, one for a lady of education and elegant manners, qualified to act as companion in well as housekeeper and was overwhelmed with responses. The only requirement in the other advertisement was that the girl should be plain in features, but not so plain as apparently appeared to answer that appeal.
One of the best of the latter class Cornell, the other day, sent a young lady friend of his cake of Lubin's finest variety of toilet soap, with the request that she would be supplied with re-
apparently appeared to answer that appeal.

Bishop Ames tells a story of a slave

"Yes, massa, do Lord do help me powerful somethin' to say." "You see, massa,

THE PARLIAMENT OF CANADA.
To Morning Papers.
OTTAWA, March 23.
Mr. Devlin raised the question of privilege, relating to a question in the Nov-Scotia Herald, which stated that he (Devlin) spoke falsely when he said he had Bishop Sweeney's authority for voting for the amendment of the member for Quebec on the Nova Brunswick school question. He called on several members to affirm that statement on their personal knowledge.

Mr. Devlin's bill respecting the cutting of timber was amended so as to allow the Government to pay cutters by fees or salaries as they pleased and was then read a third time and passed.
Some other Government measures were advanced a stage without discussion.
The Senate amendments to the Marine Telegraph bill were concurred in.

HOUSE OF ASSEMBLY.
(By Telegraph to the Tribune.)
FREDERICTON, March 23.
Hon. Mr. Willis moved resolution relating to union of Maritime Provinces, according to notice.

The Speaker ruled it out of order.
Hon. Mr. Willis said he would, of course, submit to the Speaker's ruling.
He then moved the following resolution: Resolved, That in the opinion of this House a Legislative Union of New Brunswick, Nova Scotia and Prince Edward Island would lessen the expenses connected with their Government and legislation, have a tendency to diminish local prejudices which, to some extent, obstruct their material progress, add weight to the influence of their representatives in the Federal Parliament, and otherwise promote the interests of the people.

The Hon. Provincial Secretary committed the bill in amendment of the Act relating to attachment and the abolition of imprisonment for debt, Mr. Richard in the chair. Details of the bill were discussed quite fully by Messrs. Davidson, Jones, Austin, McKenzie, Smith and others.

The discussion was continued until after four o'clock. A number of amendments being well considered and made, progress was finally reported that several sections might be changed previous to the bill being finally agreed to.

Dr. Dow introduced a bill to incorporate Miller Flaming Manufacturing Co.
The Surveyor-General recommended the bill relating to trespass on lands and other property of the Crown, Mr. Keane in the chair. The bill was incorporated a section in the bill setting forth that the jury from whom number is seized, may, after fourteen days, apply to a judge to have the claim heard and decided upon.

Mr. Rogers presented the petition of Joseph McAlman and others of Albert, praying that in legislation in regard to the Albert Railway private rights may be protected.
Mr. Austin presented the petition of S. Dean and others relative to the St.
John Slaughter House bill.
Mr. Davidson committed the bill relating to the Albert Railway, Mr. Burns in the chair. The mover explained that

LONDON, March 23.
In the debate in the Commons last night on the bill for the amendment of the Peace Preservation Act, the Home Rulers opposing the bill contrasted the prevalence of crime in England with the prevalence in Ireland.
Sir Edward Watkin retorted that English people do not welcome American conspirators among them, but are conspicuous for their loyalty and law-abiding dispositions. He said that if the Irish would renounce the leadership of stump orators, and adopt industry in place of political agitation, the necessity for exceptional legislation would cease.

Mr. Disraeli pointed out the contrast contained in the bill, and, appealing to the patriotism of the Irish members, he asked them not to agitate the country by an opposition to a bill that must be passed.

The bill passed its second reading by
