AT THE SETTING OF THE SUN
As I've watched old Phoebus peering,
Through the mists of early morn,
In my soul new aspirations,
Hopes and wishes have been born;
For I know he'll be successful
As his westward way he'll run,
And that gold shall gild the heavens
At the setting of the sun.

Now o'er hill and plain and valley
Phoebus has pursued his way,
Till the west is reached in triumph
At the closing of the day.
How delightful is his welcome;
All his duties have been done,
And the distant skies are golden
At the setting of the sun.

Peace is by the scene suggested
Which enthalls me in the west;
Now old Phoebus, justly happy,
Seemingly lies down to rest.
When my journey shall have ended,
And my varied tasks are done,
May the skies be truly golden
At the setting of the sun. —Mack.
