

A WINTER SONG.

ONE night when as usual we foresters met,
And with honest October were just getting wet,
There came an old goblin so grim and so grey,
That alarm'd at the sight we were hastening away.

All shivering and chattering with cold he appear'd,
While the icicles rattled that hung on his beard;
There was no need the name of our guest to enquire,
We all cried, "'Tis Winter, so stir up the fire."
