Prekings ynow the Knackenocken... From the Editor's table, always well furnished, of the Kideberbocker, we pick the following:

"Do you know?" writes a friend at Easton, Penn; "the Dutch word for sausages?" It is "ours or wars?" and is pronounced just like our word "worse." Ide not know the exact spelling; perhaps some Dutch friend will give it to you; but I am going to tell you a story about it which I heard from the lips of a working-man in my father's employ, and will try to give as nearly as possible in his own words: "There was a Yankee feller worked one year to Walron's; they're Dutch, you know, and they talk Dutch, and this feller he did n't know nothin' about Dutch. Wal, one mornin' they had sussengers for breakfast, and they had kinder kep'em too long, and they was a little changed. Wal this feller had eaten some of of 'em, and the old man asked him if he would take some more ware. "No, by thurder! says the feller, says he; 'if it's worse than that, I can't stand it, no how!"

The following reminds one of King Henry's remark in Chevy Chase:

"A friend of ours mentions a laughable anecdote which he heard not long ago in Rotter d.—m. It seems that on one occasion one of our national vessels, accalentally fired a shotted gun. No sooner did the ball strike the Dutch ship, than up ran a defiance flag, the firing ceased, and two officers came in the Captain's gig to announce that a man had commander, instantly ordered his barge, and in fifteen minutes was on board the Dutch vessel, explaining the accident; adding, as he coricladed: 'And the man whose carelesness has occasioned this said disaster shall be hanged at the yard-arm tomorrow morning, if I succeed in discovering him.' No, no, no !" exclaimed the Dutch Commander; it is he noff sow; if each is blanaty more Dootchmena in Holland—blaanty!"

The market closes steady to-day, (Fridey.) at the full prices of our last Circular for the better descriptions of American, and an advance of 13d, in the lower and midding qualities. powers to obtain an necessary information, by survey and investigation, relating to see cost, practicability and advantages of the several possible routes, and to report upon the same to this Meeting, as well as upon the means, whereby the Railroad can be most speedity constructed for which purposes the said Committee are hereby authorized to place themselves in communication with such

He mentioned the different routes—five in number—which were candidates for public favor, and mentioned the several objections against them. This will, however, come more prominently before our readers when the survey is made.

Win. Marray, Esq., seconded the Resolution. Hon. R. U. Harwood made a few remarks in support of his particular line of Road.

Ira Gonid, Esq., fn support of the Resolution, said that he gave the project his hearty concurrence. Without, at the present time, entering into the question of localities, he felt that we must all agree that a Railroad to Present and further, was absolutely necessary, and that by the most practicable route. That the project was practicable, and could be carried out within a very short space of time, he felt confident, if they would only agree that it must be carried out. The necessity of the Road was pressing upon us every day. We had already realised the fatal effects of the opening of the Ordensburgh Railroad. Every man could trace a detraction from his business. He himself had received telegraphs requesting to know what he would give for wheat; and subsequently he learned that it had gone to Oswego or Ogdensburg, and from theuse into the interior to Boston of New York. He had lately real of a very large meeting at Saratoga to receive the report of a survey of a line to backets' Harbot. We must put a stop to our being bled so profusely at every practicable point; and to do so we must set to in carnest, and say we must have a Railroad to Prescott. As to the router mentioned, it only shewed that we had five different ways: and when those who had been disappointed found that they could not have it by their door, why then they should do as they do in Vermont, say they would have a Road of their own, and build a Branch.

AN EPISCOPALIAN. Montreal, December 2, 1850.

THE WEATHER yesterday was rather cold. A bluff north-easter prevailed through ut the day, beinging with it in the afternoon a drizzling rain which from a sit came down, but which afterwards changed to hill, and fluidly into snow, which isll lightly till the evening. a certain short period. So alarming and critical was the situation of the English in Dahomy, that Captain Forbes, of Her. Majesty's brig Boneta, has been dispatched to England with the intelligence.

"If true, which we have no good reason to diabolical traffic, have procured these difficulties, we have only to say that they have quite overreached themselves, and will be caught in their

we have only to say that they may eached themselves, and will be caught in their own snare.

"The least unjustifiable violence committed on British subjects will be held as a sufficient pretext, and life Majesty's Government will most assuredly avail themselves of it—to blockade the Dahomy territory; cut off, the communications by which the sinve-trade there is fostered, and be satisfied only with its total aunitaliation from His Majesty's dominions.

The Liberian subject was been to have driven the slave-trade effectually from their coast. An attempt has been made by a Portuguers feluces to land at Gallinas, but she was closely watched by a British brig-of-war, and proceeded to Trade Town, where her supercarge landed and endeavored to make a bargain for some slaves. The Liberian Government schr. Lark, was despatched to watch her movements, which so alarmed the captain that he miled precipitately from Trade Town, towing the supercarge on shore. The supercarge was afterwards decured and sent on board the British beig Hotsel.—Boaton Traveller, November 22.
