The devoted city of Rheims may be razed to the ground, it is felt in London, not because in itself, it has any strategic importance, but because it happens to be in the way of the operations directed against the plateau above the city where the allies undoubtedly will endeavor to disprove, as did Napoleon, the theory of Blucher that these heights are impregnable even if defended by only 25,000 men. Nowhere else along the battle line is any great effort being made to carry a frontal attack, and unless one side or the other executes an outflanking movement, Rheims may witness the most decisive battle of the war.

Belgian sorties continue from the shelter of Antwerp, but neither the Belgians nor the Germans have brought about any real change in their relative positions in this district.

From Petrograd come stories of the continued flight of the broken Austrian armies in Galicia, while at the same time Vienna declares that these armies are reorganizing for offensive action. It would seem clear, however, that only Przemyel is to-day standing out against the total occupation of Galicia by Russia. Petrograd reports further that the populace already is fleeing from Cracow, from which city a portion of the unique library already has been removed for safety. Reports received in the Russian capital are to the effect that Austrian Polish volunteers are declining to serve against the Russians. These German Navy to be Dug Out Like Rats From a Hole.

LONDON, Sept. 22-Winston Churchill, First Lord of Admiralty, addressed a crowd of 12,000 to 14,000 men last night at a recruiting meeting at Liverpool, He reiterated his appeal for a million men and said: "I have no anxiety over the result of the war. God has blessed our arms. We have had unexpected good fortune. I could not have hoped that cir umstances at this stage of the war would have been so favorable for the allies. I had certainly expected that the great battles in France would have been much further south, and that a greater measure of desecration and oppression would have been inflicted on the gallant people of that country.

"If we are sure we have time—and I think that the navy can give us time—even if this battle is as disastrous as it appears to be triumphant, and if the other battles are sinister, still the British Empire can if its resolution fails not, finally settle this matter as it chooses. men and said: "I have no anxiety finally settle this matter as it chooses.

"As far as the navy is concerned it cannot fight while the enemy remains in port. We hope the navy will have the chance of settling the question with the German fleet. If they do not come out and fight in time of war they will be dug out like rats out of a hole.

"Since I have been responsible for the navy I have seen every day evidence of the espionage system which Germany has maintained in this country. I have evidence put under my eyes month after month of agents whom they maintained year after year in after month of agents whom they maintained year after year in England in great numbers.

"You have heard of the German ambassador to the United States indulging in vague talk of peace, but peace is not on the lips of those who are invading the territory of their neighbors and carrying fire and sword through peaceful provinces.

"While that spectacle continues, the white smoke of their abominable cruelty goes up to heaven.

"It is no time to talk of peace.

"It is no time to talk of peace. We are only beginning.

"Peace with the German people may be arranged in good time, but peace with Prussian militarism—there is no peace short of the grave with that vile tryranny.

"Peace will be found in the words of the King: "When the worthy causes for which we are fighting have been fully achieved."
