UPSET THEIR PLANS.

The Story of a Hurry Call For a New York Ambulance.

A young physician tells an amusing experience of the days of his ambulance service. A hurry call was received one day, and he with the ambulance was dispatched with great haste to a tenement in one of the poorer parts of the city.

He climbed several flights of stairs and found at the top a family gathered in a dismantled room, surrounded by their goods and chattels, evidently ready to move.

The patient had been burned, the doctor knew, but he failed to discover signs of one until the mother of the family explained that she was the victim and anxiously volunteered the information that she was ready to go to the hospital at any time. She was a remarkably healthy accident case, and the young physician explained that he would have to make an examination and learn the true nature of her injuries before taking her off.

She demurred somewhat wrathfully at this, but finally uncovered an arm, where was to be seen a bad but not serious burn of a week before. It was not a burn requiring hospital treatment, and the doctor departed, a severe tongue lashing from the would be patient following him as he hurried down the stairs, glad to get off with nothing more serious.

The woman's wrath had good cause, he found upon inquiry. The family had been dispossessed, and it had been decided that the husband and children should go for a time to one of his relatives, while the wife would seek refuge in the hospital. In this way they would tide over their troubles, but the doctor's unforeseen refusal to play his part had upset their plans seriously.

HELPING OUT THE HERO.

A Realistic Scene That Was Not Down on the Playbill.

In the old days, when a certain Texan city was not exactly the charming place it is now, I was playing in "Monte-Christo" to a crowded house. All afternoon the cowboy of his type of the day had been coming into town for the performance, and I could see him well in evidence in the front row of the balcony, his skin jacket shining and his pistols glistening in his belt.

The arch villain was facing his fate in the final act, and I spoke my lines, "Your time has come." Suddenly a cowboy stood up in the front rank in the balcony, drew his pistol and fired a shot on the villain of the piece. "If you don't fix him," rang out his voice, "I will!"

There he stood ready to put the threat into execution.

"Kill me quick! Kill me quick!" cried my fellow actor under his breath, trembling at the prospect of a more realistic end from the gentleman in the balcony. But the joke was too good a one for that. I prolonged the duel as much as possible, but presently the arch villain took his first plausible opportunity to expire at my feet.

"That's right; served him right. If you hadn't done it, I would!" came approvingly from the voice in the balcony.

But that circumstance lessened my chances to get any one to play the part later. Actors would come to me for an engagement in the villain's role and ask, "Are you going to play in Texas next year, Mr. O'Neill?"

"Yes."

"Thank you!"

That would be the end of it, for each would say, "Good day!"—James O'Neill in Saturday Evening Post.

A True Poem.

How hard it is to tell what makes a true poem, a lasting poem! When one asks himself what it is, how many things arise, how hard to narrow the list down to a few things! Is it beauty? Then what is beauty? One meets with beautiful poems every day that he never thinks of or recurs to again. It is certain that without one thing there is no real poetry—genuine passion. The fire came down out of heaven and consumed Ellisha's offering because Ellisha was sincere. Plan and build your poem never so deftly, mankind will not permanently care for it unless it has genuine feeling. It must be impassioned. —John Burroughs in Century.

The Supreme Test.

"You may be a clergyman," said the railway dignitary to the stranger who had applied for a half fare permit, "but you haven't furnished me sufficient evidence of it. How do you pronounce M-e-t-h-i-s-e-d-e-k?"

"M-e-t-h-i-s-e-d-e-k," promptly responded the stranger.

Without another word the railway man made out the permit.

The Way Out.

"How did you ever manage to get out of that opera house?" asked a friend of a man who had been in the opera house for a long time.

"Say, Bill, that was easy. I told her that I would buy it for her on her thirty-fifth birthday and asked her to let me know the time."

Culture.

She-But you must admit that society in our village is all the time becoming more cultured.

He-Yes. I hear that at the minstrel show instead of end men they advertise "superior terminal facilities."

Every one ought to know his Shakespeare, for the plays constitute, on the whole, the foremost textbook which our race has given to the world.

You can't be mean and happy any more than an apple can be sour and sweet.

Military—Lee-Infield Vs. Civilians—Winchester

A rifle struggle took place at the Harwich rifle butts Thursday between the military with their Lee-Infield and the famous Harwich rifle men with their Winchester.

The wind was strong and shifty all day, but the firing was steady and continued till sunset. Victory at last was with the Harwich men. But a look at the score will show that two handlers of the Lee-Infield made the largest score. Pt. McCormick and Mr. S. Warnock. Capt. McLaren made the best score of the city soldiers.

Harwich riflemen a few years ago stood ninth for the Bisley out of all Canada. Secretary McCormick, John McKellar and J. Spicer made the big score for Harwich. The following is the score for 100, 200 and 400 yards range, with total for each man:—

Military.
Capt. McLaren, 30, 23, 31—84.
Corp. Houston, 34, 29, 32—95.
Pt. McCormick, 33, 32, 34—99.
Sergeant Burrell, 31, 25, 23—79.
Pt. Spicer, 32, 25, 34—91.
S. Warnock, 34, 31, 33—98.
Corp. Hutchison, 31, 20, 24—75.
Sergeant Warnock, 32, 25, 22—80.
Total, 701.

Civilians.
Capt. Arnold, 30, 28, 33—91.
Secretary McCormick, 34, 30, 32—96.
John McKellar, 35, 29, 31—95.
J. Spicer, 35, 31, 30—96.
A. McCormick, 34, 28, 27—89.
A. Reid, 32, 30, 31—93.
W. Ferguson, 32, 24, 26—82.
B. Morrison, 33, 25, 28—86.
Total points, 736.

Possible for each man, 105 points.
