JUDGE CENSURED JURY BUT THEY DIDN'T BUDGE

Found Abram not Guilty on all Charges and Maintained the Accuracy of Their Verdict-Judge and Crown Attorney Comp etely Non-plussed - His Honor Scores Them.

Another rather dramatic scene occurred in court to-day, when the jury brought in a verdict of "not guilty" in the case of Rex. vs (Abram charged with burglarizing the Stephen's residence. The crown attorney evidently throught that it was shot without missing that Abram would be convicted. The judge charged very strongly against him, and it was thought the evidence was without a

When the foreman uttered the words "not guilty" the crown attorney looked petrified and the judge was equally dumfounded.

"Do you," said the crown attorney, mean to say that you find the prisonr not guilty ?"

"Yes," replied the foreman. "What," said the crown council, "on both counts, that is of burglary in the night, and stealing in the day-

"Yes," replied the foreman.
"Well,' spoke up Judge Bell, "this is the most extraordinary verdict I ever heard after twenty years experience. Surely upon the evidence you do not acquit him of both charges: You better retire again and consider it."

The looks of the foreman and his prother intymen heapoke instant debrother jurymen bespoke instant de-fiance. They again retired for just a minute and promptly returned with the same verdict of "not guilty," and the majesty of the law had to be satis-

This was a charge of indecent assault in which a young girl of fifteen years was complainant. After the close of the crown's case, Geo. G. Mar-tin counsel for Kribbs, submited that no case had been made out, and the no case had been made out, and the court was very much of the same opinion, but allowed it to go us the jury on the question of a common assault.

Mr. Martin in a strong eloquent address covered the crown attorney's case with ridicule, much to the amusement of the court audience, and it took the pury just five minutes to acquit the prisoner.

REX VS. ANDREW EPPERSON. Epperson was then brought up and placed in the dock to face two serious charges as the result of the previous sided. The chairman modestly murmured omething in connection with his long established and well known total prohibition principles.

But it was Ald. Pritchard's chance, 1 He gurgled with compressed gles for a moment, gave a little preliminary complacent cough and leaned towards the man with the bluff. "Let me see, Mac," he said. "Didn't you and I have a little bet about something ?"

But the man of measure was game "You bet we did. You won a hat from me all right, and you can get it any time at Stony's. I only impose one little condition. It's got to be one of those high flyers, like the Mavor's:"

This little incident served to pour oil upon the troubled waters and recapture the white pinioned omen of Peace that had temporarily taken to

The City Engineer complained that he was hampered in his work by aldermen giving personal directions and comments. He emphatically declined to take orders from anyone except the committee or council in session. He was always gratified to have suggesions, but unless this rule was estab-

he considered an injustice in con tion with the drawing of earth and gravel by draymen.

The Engineer said he was appointed to work for the city's interests and would never sign a pay sheet unless the city had got one hundred cents worth of labor for the dollar expended. If he was not running matters in the city's interests, then the aldermen would be fools to keep him a moment.

Ald. Mounteer said he had no desire to dictate but thought the Engineer had been unreasonable.

The matter was finally adjusted by resolution setting forth that every oart must draw a ton or better and be provided with a blue tin badge with white number supplied by the Engineer. The chairman, Ald. Marshall, whipped off his coat when he took his seat to preside over the deliberations of the civic Board of Works last ev-ening. Ald. Pritchard followed suit, but Ald. Mounteer took a seat by the open window and smiled serenely at his sweltering colleagues.
