Dear Sirs.—We are sending out gratis to say of Mathieu's Syrup and can consider it a success. It is the most popular and successful Cough Medicine we handle. Owing to the absence of any drug store in this vicinity there is a great variety of proprietary medicines sold in the course of the year, and Mathieu's Syrup conveniently leads in its own class.

CHAPTER XIII.

LIKE A LEAF ON THE RIVER.

"Well, that's what she always calls me—Lynette—don't you know?" said the girl smiling. "It must be she is thinking of, but I don't know what she means about the locket."

"Don't you understand? She must have heard some talk about Mrs. Mc Donald's story of her daughter's locket."

"No, I don't think she has heard a word, and I don't know what she means by her savings," replied Miss Grimes.

"Well, I'll come again to-morrow, and maybe she'll be more rational then, so that I can talk to her. Take this basket for her please. There are some dainties in it from Aunt Jill," said Lynette kindly.

Then the two girls rode away, and the nurse stood in the door and watched them out of sight, muttering to herself:

"I don't think Sally Ann will be any more rational to-morrow than she is to-day. I think she's a very ill woman, and there's not one chance in ten for her life. Well, I'll go in, and I hope she may stay asleep a good while longer, for my ears are a-wary listening to her crazy chatter about linnets, and lockets, and wedding presents. Poor soul, maybe she's harking back to the days when she was engaged to marry a fellow that got killed in the army; but I never heard anything about him giving her a locket, and I don't believe he did either."

CHAPTER XIV.

AN ANGRY SCHEMER.

Soon after the two girls entered the house, Miss Halliburton came into the parlor saying:

"Lynette, I was in Ronceverte this morning, and Miss La Mode told me to tell you that you really must come to-morrow to be fitted for your wants, or they would not be ready in time for the wedding."

Lynette paled, then flushed, as she tossed her head, and Miss Halliburton smiled wickedly. They all knew that any reference to the wedding always made Lynette very angry.

"You will really be obliged to go to-morrow," insisted Vida.

Then she seated herself at the piano and rattled off in splendid "come hither to the wedding."

Lynette cried angrily:

"I wish it were your wedding, Vida, instead of mine. You take more interest in it than I do."

The red-haired beauty whirled around on the piano-stool and laughed mockingly.

"Poor little Lynette! I wonder if you'd take more interest in it if Stephen Belcourt were the bridegroom instead of Mr. Prestine?"

"Yes, I would!" the girl replied, with angry dining.

"Ham-n-n! I don't think Mr. Prestine would feel flattered to hear it."

You may tell him if you choose," flushed Lynette, hoping that she would.

Vida was furious at heart, but she forced a smirking smile and exclaimed:

"You certainly display a very perturbed taste in your preference for Stephen Belcourt, who will be long for the murder of his pretty girl wife."

"He did not murder the girl, Vida, and you know it?" angrily.

"All the evidence goes to prove his guilt," she retorted.

"Miss Halliburton?"

Both turned quickly to Myrtle, who had spoken for the first time. Her blue eyes were glittering angrily, and two spots of crimson burned on her beautiful dimpled cheeks.

"Well?" cried Vida curtly.

"Mrs. Halliburton, you know perfectly well that you believe Stephen Belcourt an innocent man."

Vida stared in momentary confusion at this daring challenge then flushed out defiantly:

"I do not believe him innocent!"

"Then you have perjured yourself!"

Miss Flora Coulson of Orillia, Ont., writes as follows:—

Orillia, Ont.—

Dear Sirs—

In September last I purchased a box of Dr. Bovell's Iron Tonic Pills from you. I was a number to Neuralgia. Before I had used half a box I received benefit from their use. I went on taking them and purchased another box. I now feel like a new creature, and can highly recommend Dr. Bovell's Iron Tonic Pills to people afflicted as I was."

Yours truly,

MRS. FLORA COULSON.

If you suffer from Neuralgia, no other remedy will do as much good as Dr. Bovell's Iron Tonic Pills—it is specific.

Dr. Bovell's Home Remedies are sold by all dealers. Ask for them. If not obtainable through your dealer within a reasonable time, send 25c (in stamps) to me for any article you require.

Box 219, G. O. St. John's, Nfld.

I—I how dare you make such a charge, girl?" furiously.

"I can prove it!" with withering contempt.

And as Vida gazed at her in alarm and dismay she continued:

"You have written notes of sympathy to Stephen Belcourt in prison, asserting your belief in his innocence and proffering monetary assistance in his defense, if needed, and asserting your confidence in his complete vindication at the trial."

Vida's expression of utter confusion showed her guilt plainly; but she made a feeble protest:

"It is not true. I—I never wrote him a line. It is a clever forgery!"

Myrtle gave a mocking laugh, and while assured that he was innocent, was still every instant without benefit, then I procured Egyptian Liniment from the first application of which I was relieved in less than a week. For weeks I put away the ointments and walked with a cane though I weighed 221 pounds.

I cannot speak too highly of this Liniment.

Not only the severest cases, but the scores of little trifles that come up, cuts, bruises, burns and the like are quickly relieved and cured by Douglas' Egyptian Liniment.
