Coddling Antipathies.

By RUTH CAMERON.

RUTH CAMERON

At a summer camp, the women of the party had joined forces to whisk the dinner dishes out of the way. When the silver appeared, the dishwasher one of the dryers threw down her towel. "Put away," she said. "I hate to dry silver."

"So do I," said another, doing likewise.

"Well, I'm not very fond of it, myself, now you call it to my mind, but success I can do it," said the third, with the frankness and good humor of camp life. And she dried the silver.

The little incident interested me. All three disliked drying silver, a distaste I share myself. The first two pampered the dislike. The third ignored it.

How One Can Put A Dislike Out of Business.

Did you ever realize how much one can increase a dislike by pampering it and how one can put a dislike practically out of business by ignoring it?

I've noticed again, and again in my own experience that if I defer to a dislike it immediately begins to gain power over me, whereas if I ignore it, it weakens.

People with violent antipathies are not necessarily people with strongly stressed temperaments. They may be merely self-indulgent people who have yielded to their dislikes until they have raised them to the dignity and strength of antipathies.

"I Never Eat Fat."

The person who says "I hate Fat—"

I never eat it," may have started with no stronger objection to it than he who accepts the fat with the lean. But the one set up dislike as an idol to which courtesy and the preferences of others, and anything else which interfered, should be sacrificed, while the other regarded it as an inconvenient obstacle to be overcome.

"Before I was married I had notions that I couldn't eat this and that and the other," a woman told me the other day. "I must have made a perfect nuisance of myself. But when I had to run a house myself and found how hard it was to think of things to have, I forgot all about most of those dislikes."

I suspect a good many of us have had similar experiences.

"I Don't Want To" The Final Word.

You have probably noticed how often children, especially undisciplined children, say "I don't want to" when they are asked to do this or that. They think that should settle the matter they expect their antipathy to be a supreme law. Is it not a sign of childishness and lack of self-discipline when we grown-ups exalt our antipathies and try to make "I don't want to" a supreme law?

"Perhaps we can't help having opinions," says Mrs. Wiggs, "but we can help expressing them as often as we do."

To paraphrase, "Perhaps we can't help having antipathies, but we can help coddling them as much as we do."

Mapleton's Peanut Butter is made in England. When you buy it you will know its value. When the children get it on their bread they know its quality. Cheap nourishment these strenuous times. The proof of the pudding is the eating of it.

A GREAT WAR FEATURE AT THE CRESCENT.

The great war feature: "A War Baby," attracted large audiences at the Crescent Picture Palace yesterday and will be repeated to-day; all the other pictures on the same programme were equally appreciated and received unstinted applause, especially the two comedies which kept the spectators in roars of laughter; the usual extra pictures are shown at to-day's big matinee and the children are sure to have a good time. On Monday Charles Reade's great story, "Peg Woffington" will be shown, this is truly a great picture and you should not miss seeing it.

PSYCHOLOGICAL STUDY OF LOVE IMPULSES.

One of the most beautiful love stories ever given at the Nickel Theatre was seen last evening and it was closely followed by the large audience. It was entitled: "Stars Their Course Change," and was acted in three reels by the Essanay Company, Francis X. Bushman, Edna Mayo and Bryant Washburn played the principal characters. It is a wonderful psychological study of love impulses and was highly interesting from start to finish. The Harmony boys, Messrs. Fushins and Cairns, were in splendid form last evening. The whole programme will be repeated this evening and we strongly advise all who were not present yesterday to attend.

Worth Dying For.

(The 'Herald Telegraph,' Montreal.) In connection with the announcement from Washington that the sinking of the 'William P. Frye' is to be settled with Germany on a cash basis, it is interesting to recall the fact, little known, that the now famous ship got her name from the late United States senator, William P. Frye, who represented Maine for 30 years. Senator Frye paid one of the most notable tributes to Great Britain that has ever been made by a representative of a foreign power. An extract from that speech is well worth repeating at this time:

"This little incident, with which you are familiar, is a marvelous illustration of the protection which Great Britain gives to her subjects. The King of Abyssinia took a British subject named Cameron in 1867 and carried him up to the fortress of Magdala, upon the heights of a rocky mountain, and put him in a dungeon. It took six months for the British to find this out. Then Great Britain demanded his immediate release, which King Theodore refused. In less than ten days after his refusal was received, 16,000 British soldiers, including 5,000 Sepoys, were on board ships of war, sailing down the coast. They disembarked, marched across the terrible country a distance of 400 miles under a burning sun, up to the mountain, up to the very heights in front of the towering dungeon; then they battled, battered down the iron gates in the stone wall, reached down into the dungeon, and lifted out that one British subject. Then they carried him down the mountain, across the land, put him on board ship, and sped away to his own land in safety. That cost Great Britain $25,000,000 and made General Napier Lord Napier of Magdala. That was a great thing for a country to do—a country that has an eye that can see across the ocean; all across the land, away up to the mountain heights, and away down to the darksome dungeons, one subject out of her 300,000,000 of people, and then has an arm strong enough and long enough to stretch across the same ocean, across the same land, from the same mountain heights, down to the same dungeon, and then lift him out and carry him home to his country and friends! In God's name, who would not die for a country that would do that?"

Business Improving at Bell Island.

From people who recently reached the city from that section we learn that business is brisker at Bell Island at present. Both Companies are carrying on operations on a larger scale than last year. The miners are engaged clearing out the dump pits and the exports of ore for the quarter ending September 30th, was twenty-five per cent. in excess of the corresponding period last year.

One Pair of Hands is enough.

If you give your Cook a Gas Cooker she can always cook her best and need never keep you waiting because she has nothing else to do but cook.

She has no troublesome coal fire to look after, but can get the exact heat she wants for every dish by merely turning a tap—and she can cook several dishes (each requiring a different degree of heat) at the same time.

The Gas Cooker needs no preparation, makes no cleaning work, and is turned out as soon as it is finished with and therefore burns no unnecessary fuel.

By using a Gas Water-Heater in addition to the Gas Cooker hot water is supplied for all household purposes with the greatest promptitude, and the use of coal in the kitchen can be done away with altogether.

Where Gas Appliances are used in the kitchen the cook will always find that "one pair of hands is enough."
