Well Known Screen Star Gets into Trouble Trying to Help Girl

FAIRBANKS IN HIS ENTHUSIASTIC MANNER IS ROUNDED UP BY POLICE WHEN HE TRIES TO HELP YOUNG LADY

Douglas Fairbanks will be seen as a dyed-in-the-wool Greenwich Villager in his new production "The Nut," coming at the Majestic Theatre Wednesday. As a wealthy young fellow whose hobby is invention, he adopts all the eccentricities and Bohemianism attributed to the people of this famous quarter.

The incorporation of a number of clever novelty features make this vehicle different from anything Fairbanks has ever before appeared in. The outstanding element in the picture is the remarkable love story that runs through it. As a wealthy young fellow with a hobby for invention, the hero falls so desperately in love with a girl that he really touches your heart with the mishaps he encounters in his efforts to win favor in her eyes. Everything happens to him from losing his clothes to being suspected of murder. How he at last works out his problem furnishes one of the most remarkable endings ever presented, and for that reason the theatre management believes the public will be nutty about "The Nut."
