PRESIDENT MCKINLEY'S WOUND PROVED FATAL!

He Passed Away Shortly After 2 O'Clock This Morning, Surrounded by His Family and Friends.

All Known Means of Prolonging Life Proved Fruitless—"Good-Bye; Good-Bye; It Is God's Way; His Will Be Done," Were His Last Words—Excitement in Buffalo—Pan-American Exposition Closed for Three Days—

Saturday, Sunday and Monday.

Milburn House, Buffalo, Saturday, Sept. 14.—President McKinley died at 2:15 a.m. He had been unconscious since 7:05 p.m. His last conscious hour on earth was spent with the wife to whom he devoted a lifetime of care. He died unattended by a minister of the Gospel, but his last words were a humble submission to the will of the God in whom he believed. He was reconciled to the cruel fate to which an assassin's bullet had condemned him, and faced death in the same spirit of calmness and poise which had marked his long and honorable career. His last conscious words reduced to writing by Dr. Mann, who stood at his bedside, when they were uttered, were as follows: "Good-bye; all; good-bye; it is God's way. His will be done, not ours." His relatives and the members of his official family were at the Milburn house, except Secretary Wilson, who did not avail himself of the opportunity, and some of his close personal and political friends took leave of him. This painful ceremony was simple. His friends simply came to the door of the sick room, took a longing glance at him and turned tearfully away. He was practically unconscious during this time. But the power of the heart stimulants, including oxygen, were employed to restore him to consciousness for his final parting with his wife. He asked for her; she sat at his side and held his hand. He consoled her and bade her good-bye. She went through the heart-breaking scene with the same bravery and fortitude with which she has borne the grief of the tragedy which ended his life.

The immediate cause of the president's death is undetermined. His physicians disagree and it will possibly require an autopsy to finally fix the exact cause. The president's remains will be taken to Washington and there will be a state funeral.

Vice-President Roosevelt, who now succeeds to the presidency, may take the oath of office wherever he happens to hear the news. The cabinet will, of course, resign in a body, and President Roosevelt will have an opportunity of forming a new cabinet if he so desires. The rage of the people of Buffalo against the president's assassin when they learned today that he was dying was boundless. Thousands surrounded the jail, and the entire police force of the city and two regiments of soldiers were necessary to secure his protection.

Near the End.

LAST NIGHT'S BULLETINS. At 4 p.m. the president's physicians reported that he was only slightly improved since the last bulletin. The pulse and temperature remain the same at that hour. (Signed), George B. Cortelyou, secretary to the president.

The 5:45 p.m. bulletin said: "The president is dying. His physicians have so announced to those near him."

At 6:30 p.m. the physicians reported that the president's condition was most serious, in spite of vigorous stimulation. The depression continued and is profound. Unless it can be relieved the end is only a question of time.

At 6:30 it was announced that the president did not respond to the oxygen, and his physicians announced that unless he responded to stimulation it was only a matter of a short time.

THE FINAL PREPARATIONS. Before 6 o'clock it was clear to those at the president's bedside that he was dying, and preparations were made for the last sad offices of farewell from those who were nearest and dearest to him. Oxygen had been administered steadily, but with little effect in keeping back the approach of death. The president came out of one period of unconsciousness only to relapse into another. But in this period, when his mind was partially cleared, occurred a series of events of profoundly touching character downstairs.

With tear-stained faces, members of the cabinet were grouped in anxious waiting. They knew the end was near, and that the time had come when they must see him for the last time on earth. This was about 5 o'clock. It was an awful moment for them. One by one they ascended the stairs—Secretary Root, Secretary Hitchcock and Attorney-General Knox. Secretary Wilson also was there, but he held back, not wishing to see the president in his last agony. There was only a momentary stay of the cabinet officers at the threshold of the death chamber. Then they withdrew, the tears streaming down their faces, and the words of intense grief choking in their throats.

ASKED FOR HIS WIFE. After they left the sick room the physicians rallied him to consciousness, and the president asked almost immediately that his wife be brought to him. The doctors fell back into the shadows of the room as Mrs. McKinley came through the doorway. The strong face of the dying man lighted up with a faint smile as their hands were clasped. She sat beside him and held his hand. Despite her physical weakness, she bore up bravely under the ordeal. The president in his last period of consciousness, which ended about 7:40 o'clock, chanted the words of the beautiful hymn, "Nearer, My God, to Thee," and his last audible conscious words, as taken down by Dr. Mann at his bedside, were: "Good-bye, all; good-bye. It is God's way. His will be done, not ours." Then his mind began to wander, and soon afterwards he completely lost consciousness. His life was prolonged for hours by the administration of oxygen, and the president finally expressed a desire to be allowed to die. About 8:30 the administration of oxygen ceased and the pulse grew faint, very faint.

SINKING TO SLUMBER. He was sinking gradually like a child into an eternal slumber. By 10 o'clock the pulse could not longer be felt in his extremities and they grew cold. Below stairs the grief-stricken gathering waited sadly for the end. All the evening those who had hastened here as fast as steel and steam could carry them continued to arrive. They drove in carriages, and when the carriages were whisked up in automobiles, all intent upon hearing when death came.

One of the last to arrive was Attorney-General Knox, who reached the house at 8:30 p.m. He was permitted to go upstairs to look for the last time upon the face of his friend.

THOSE PRESENT. Those in the house at this time were Secretaries Hitchcock, Wilson and Root; Senators Fairbanks, Hanna and Burrows; Judge Day, Col. Herrick, Abner McKinley, the president's brother, and his wife; Dr. and Mrs. Mary Barber, Miss Mary Williams, Mrs. McKinley's cousin, the physicians, including Dr. McBurney, who arrived after 8 o'clock; John G. Milburn, John N. Scott, Harry Hamilton, all of this city; Secretary Cortelyou and a number of other men; Rev. C. D. Wilson, a Methodist minister, of Tonawanda, N. Y., who was the president's pastor for three years at Canton, called at the residence to inquire about the president's condition, but did not enter the house. Another Methodist minister, who has a church near by, remained at the Milburn residence, and when the president died, he was the only one in the belief that his services might be desired.

At 9:37 Secretary Cortelyou, who had been with the president since the dying chief, sent out formal notification that the president was dying, but he LINGERED ON. His pulse growing fainter and fainter. At 11:50 p.m., when Dr. Janeway arrived, the president was barely alive. There was no need for official bulletins after this. Those who came from the house at intervals told the same story—that the president was dying, and that the end might come at any time. His tremendous vitality was now the only remaining factor in the result, and this gave hope only of brief postponement of the end. Dr. Mynter thought he might last until 2 a.m. Dr. Mann said at 11 o'clock that the president was still alive, and would probably live an hour. Thus minutes lengthened to hours and midnight came with the president still battling against death.

AT MIDNIGHT. At the midnight hour the Milburn house was a center of a scene as unimaged as though it was midnight, although a solemn hush hung over the great crowd of watchers. The entire lower part of the house was aglow with light and the many attendants and friends and relatives could be seen within moving about and occasionally coming in groups to the front door, and down the stairs. In the upper front chamber the lights were low, and on the north side, where the chamber of death is located, there were five lights, some of them becoming bright and others turned low. Secretary Root and Secretary Wilson came from the house about midnight. At 11:50 o'clock, when the president was still alive, a crowd of people, some of them coming from the station, and before 10 o'clock, weary with waiting for definite news, they had disappeared, and gone to the newspaper bulletins.
