Minister of Defence for New Zealand Says Withou Cohesion Pacific Trade Routes Cannot Be Maintained.

CANADA, NEW ZEALAND AND AUSTRALIA MUST WORK OUT SOME DEFENCE PLAN

[Canadian Press.]

Montreal, April 28 .- "That Canada, New Zealand and Australia will ultimately have to get together and adopt some common naval scheme," was the announcement made by Col. James Allan, minister of defence for New Zealand, who arrived here this morning.

THE ONLY FEASIBLE PLAN.

He said that without cohesion these three countries could not maintain trade routes in the Pacific.

Discussing the yellow peril, Col. Allan said Australia and New Zealand were determined to as far as possible keep out Orientals, and they were finding the education test imposed upon immigrants very effective. They had been able to exclude them without quarrelling with Japan or any other country.

ENFRANCHISING OF WOMEN.

The New Zealand minister said the enfranchising of women in his country and Australia had been a success, and their influence in politics had been most wholesome. Col. Allan goes to Ottawa Wednesday, and will later

INSPECTOR PLAYS NEW ROLE MAKES PROPOSAL BY PROXY TO AN IMMIGRANT WIDOW

With the party of English day night was a widow with children, the eldest about 14. She was sent out to this country by an agency and although the authorities at first demurred at letting her come Mr Riggs succeeded in making arrange ments for her.

Her name is Mrs. Hart, and she is looking for a position as housekeeper Inspector McCallum, who is reputed as an efficient inspector, took a little "flyer" into the realms of another position this morning. He tried to play the part of the little fellow who is re puted to be hanging around with a bow and a quiver of darts. A friend of his who came to this vicinity from England some years ago, and whose wife died about a year ago leaving him with two children on his hands, is looking for a wife. His mother called on Inspector McCallum and explained the situation to him, and "Mac," with his usual readiness to help the needy, promised to do all in his power for the man, who has a 100-acre farm.

The woman with the four children replied that she was one, and Mr. Mc Callum then and there proposed to her for his friend.

"You don't want to get married do you?" asked Mr. McCallum. "Because if you do I can arrange it. A friend of mine lost his wife recently, and he wants a good woman to help him take A Surprised Lady.

The woman looked at him a moment, too surprised to say anything, and then remarked that she thought she had a position, and that she did not think she would fill the bill, as she had four children of her own. Mr. McCallum sat down beside her and explained the whole matter, but still the woman was dubious. He left her at the hall waiting for word of the position that she expected, but hoping that he would be able to introduce her to his friend, and

London, April 28.-Winston Spencer Churchill, first lord of the British admiralty, gave the parliamentary committee investigating the Marconi contracts recently made by the British Government, a few hard raps during oday's sitting. Mr. Churchill was thereupon sumnoned before the committee and quesioned. He replied:

"It is a most insulting charge, and mplies that I have been skulking in the background while my colleagues have come forward and explained their position. "The abuses of so-called society would also be remedied. Fancy a God-taught wife," he said, "bringing into her home a lot of other women to waste the afternoon in card-playing. Why, it's unthinkable! There would be no more gambling in the homes, and people would cease to waste their time and substance in such frivolities as balls, dances, etc. And to think," he exclaimed, "that in our own fair city the sacred name of charity is prostituted to designate such

Or if we were to put the question to those who represent the progressive spirit of our own East End, they would no doubt assure us that a market was the most needed thing, or perhaps cheaper homes for the workingmen, and that is a great need. NAVY BILL WILL NOT BE DISCUSSED UNTIL NEXT WEEK

Liberals, True to Their Policy, Doing Everything to Rush Business.

Government Wishes to Find Out How Senate Views the Situation.

[Special to The Advertiser.] Ottawa, April 28.—The Government has decided not to bring up the naval bill until next week. Thursday is Ascension Day, and the week therefore is a broken one, so Government business of another sort, together with supply, will be the order of the week. It was at first intended to bring up the contentious measure about the middle of the week, but on Saturday last it was decided otherwise. The highways bill, the bill to aid agriculture, probably the bank bill and various other Government measures, will be proceeded with or disposed of, and handed over to the Senate for final ratification. Supply will be considered during all the time available.

The Opposition, true to its contention, has done all in its power to expedite the business of the country other than the naval bill, and no semblance of obstruction has been made, At the present rate of going a large portion of the session's legislation will be cleaned up early in May. In the meantime the temper of the Opposition is being tried out before the naval bill is again brought up, and the Government is hopeful that it will have cooled off by the time it again appears. The Opposition, however, declared that there will be no cooling Senate Reassembles.

A further reason for the postpone ment of the naval bill is believed to be the fact that the Senate reassembles tomorrow, and the Government desires to feel out the point of view of that venerable body before handing over to it its most contentious measures. The fissure has been getting wider every day, and the residents of that section are alarmed. They think that if the water ever gets in the fissure, or if the current should be swollen to any extent by heavy rains, that a large section of the roadway would be washed away. In the event of such a happening, the houses which abut on the river bank would suffer considerably, as the land at the rear of their vards has been washed away.
