> Ans.-There is something in what yo aay about a woman needing to "keer up with the times." Home comes first with the average wife and mother, and rightly so; yet, as you intimate, it is a mistake to let everything else-friendly intercourse outside the home, a com parative knowledge of events in the community and the world, and so onslip entirely by. One of the greatest tragedles in a mother's life, it seems to me, is to feel oneself growing old and regarded by the boys and girls of the family, as "out-of-date." The outer envelope should be ad-

CURFEW MUST NOT RING TONIGHT.
So many requests have been received for this poem that, although it very long, it is published today:

Slowly England's sun was setting, o'er the hilltops far away, Filling all the land with beauty at the close of one sad day, And the last rays kissed the forehead of a man and maiden fair— He with footsteps slow and weary, she with sunny floating hair; He with bowed head, sad and thoughtful, she with lips all cold and white, Struggling to keep back the murmur-"Curfew must not ring tonight."

"Sexton" Bessle's white lips faltered, pointing to the prison old, With its turrets, tall and gloomy, with its walls dark, damp and celd, "I've a lover in that prison, doomed this very night to die, At the ringing of the curfew, and no earthly help is nigh; "Cromwell will not come till sunset," and her lips grew strangely white.

As she breathed the husky whisper: "Curfew must not ring tonight."

"Bessie," calmly spoke the sexton, every word pierced her young heart, Like the piercing of an arrow, like a deadly poisoned dart— "Long, long years I've rung the curfew, from that gloomy, shadowed tower; Every evening just at sunset, it has told the twilight hour; duty ever, tried to do it just and right, Now I'm old, I will not falter-curfew, it must ring tonight."

Wild her eyes, and pale her features, stern and white her thoughtful brow, As within her secret bosom Bessie made a solemn vow; She had listened while the judges read without a tear or sigh, 'At the ringing of the curfew, Basil Underwood must die.' And her breath came fast and faster, and her eyes grew large and bright, In an undertone she murmured, "Curfew must not ring tonight.

With quick step she bounded forward, sprang within the old church door, Left the old man treading slowly, paths so oft he'd trod before; Not one moment paused the maiden, but with eyes and cheek aglow, Mounted up the gloomy tower, where the bell swung to and fro, As she climbed the dusty ladder on which fell no ray of light, Up and up, her white lips saying, "Curfew must not ring tonight."

She has reached the topmost ladder; o'er her hangs the great, dark bell, Awful is the gloom beneath her, like the pathway down to hell, Lo, the ponderous tongue is swinging—'tis the hour of curfew now, and the sight has chilled her bosom, stopped her breath and paled her breath Shall she let it ring? No, never! flash her eyes with sudden light, As she springs and grasps it firmly-"Curfew must not ring tonight."

out she swung-far out; the city seemed a speck of light below. There 'twixt heaven and earth suspended as the bell swung to and fro, And the sexton at the bell-rope, old and deaf, heard not the bell, Sadly thought, "that twilight currew, rang young Basil's funeral knell." Still the maiden clung more firmly, and with trembling lips so white, Sald to hush her heart's wild throbbing, "Curfew shall not ring tonight."

It was o'er, the bell'ceased swaying, and the maiden stepped once more Firmly on the dark old ladder, where for hundred years before Human foot had not been planted—the brave deed that she had done Should be told long ages after, as the rays of setting sun, Crimson all the sky with beauty, aged sires, with heads of white, Tell the eager, listening children-"Curfew shall not ring tonight."

O'er the distant hills came Cromwell; Bessie sees h,m, and her brew, Lately white with fear and anguish, has no anxious traces now; At his feet she tells her story, shows her hands all bruised and torn. And her face so sweet and pleading, yet with sorrow pale and worn, Fouched his heart with sudden pity, lit his eyes with misty light; "Go! Your lover lives," said Cromwell, "curfew shall not ring tonight."

Wide they flung the massive portals; led the prisoner forth to die All his bright young life before him, 'neath the darkened English sky. Bessie comes with flying footsteps, eyes aglow with love-light sweet, Kneeling on the turi beside him, lay his pardon at his feet, In his brave, strong arms he clasped her, kissed the face upturned and white, Whispered, "Darling, you have saved me-curfew will not ring tonight!"

The new note of animation in the man's voice aroused her, but she grasped his arm tighter.

"But—but—oh, can we? Won't they be hiding there, too". "It's a chance, that's all—but better than waiting here for a certainty. See there Miss McDonaid," and he caught her hand in his own, forgetful of all save his own purpose and the necessity of strengthening her to play out the game, "the trend of that gulf is to the west; except up here close to the bluff it runs too far away for a guard line. The Indians will be lying out here on the open prairic; they will creep as close in as they dare under cover of darkness. I'll bet there are twenty redsnakes now within a hundred feet of us—oh, don't shiver and lose your nerve! They'll not try to close that gap yet; it's too dangerous with us on guard and tonly one side of the coach exposed. That fellow was trying us out a while ago, and they've kept quiet ever since I and they've kept quiet ever since I and they've kept quiet ever since I let drive at him. They know the limits of the safety zone, and will keep there until just before daylight. That is when they'll try to creen up upon us. Have you got the time?"

She drew a swift breath, bolding her hand to her side.

"Oh, yes," her voice catching. "What—what clse can I do? I cannot stay here with those dead men!"
