Scene Of The Assassination Within Sight of Ivan the Terrible's Tower in Kremlin at Moscow. Murdered Grand Duke Warned That He Lived in Shadow of Tomb. Crowds Grow Threatening. Theatrical performances and all forms of social observances were immediately abandomed and the theatres were ordered to remain closed until further notice. The affair created the deepest excitement. Immense crowds gathered in the vicinity of the Kremlin, where some factions began an attack on students and other representatives of the diberal movement, while others eagerly grasped and read a revolutionary proclamation which appeared as if by magic. So threatening became the attitude of the crowds that the authorities felt obliged to order the Kremlin closed and the gates locked. The gates remained closed all night, obliging pedestrians and carriages to take roundabout routes instead of short cuts through the Kremlin precincts. The police measures to preserve order have proved effective up to this hour. Scene Of The

OSCOW, Feb. 18.—(4:20 a. m.)

Within the walls of the far famed Kremlin Palace, almost underneath the historic tower from which Ivan the Terrible watched the heads of his enemies falling beneath the axe on the famous "Red Square," and within a stone's throw of the great bell of Moscow, Grand Duke Sergius, uncle and brother-in-law of Emperor xicholas, and the chief of the reactionary party, met a terrible death shortly before 3 o'clock yesterday aftermoon.

The deed was committed by a single terrorist, who threw beneath the carriage of the Grand Duke a bomb charged with the same high power explosive which wrought Minister Von Plehve's death. The missile was packed with mails and tragments of iron, and its extended to the evening.

A military guard of honor kept watch all night. No arrangements have yet been announced for the funeral services. According to later details, Grand Duke Sergius, who was generally accompanied by his wife when out driving, was on this occasion going to his private Russian bath in his old official residence in the Verskaia street. The vehicle in which he rode was a plain, shabby carriage, such as would not be likely to attract attention. It was followed by detectives in a couple of cabs. The Grand Duke was driven rapidly, and was half way across the square between the Great Bell tower and the Nicholas gate, when the bomb was thrown beneath his carriage, where it exploded, literally demolishing the vehicle, killing the Grand Duke and fratally injuring his driver.

The assassination occurred at 3 p. m.

explosion; but he quickly arose and ran-toward the gate attempting to escape. His haste and the blood streaming from his face where he had been wounded by fragments of the bomb, attracted the fragments of the bomb, attracted the attention of a sergeant of police, who chased him before he could draw his revolver. The man did not deny his crime, but, on the contrary, gloried in its success. He expressed his satisfaction that he had been able to kill the Grand Duke without injuring his wife. He acknowledged his membership of the Socialist party, but refused to give his name, and at the jail his papers were found to be forged.

The revolver with which the assassin was armed was an automatic magazine pistol of the same type as the weapon employed by Hohenthal, the assassin of Soisalon Soininen. the procurator general of Finland, at Helsingfors, on Feb.

His injuries are not serious. The Grand Duke's coachman, who was badly injured, was removed to a hospital. Late last night he was still

The news of the tragedy spread rapidly to every part of the city, aided by extra editions of the papers, which appeared with deep black borders.

Discords Made an End of and Harmonious Relations Restored

New York, Feb. 16.—James W. Alexander, and James H. Hyde, were re-elected president and first vice-president respectively of the Equitable Life Assurance society, at the adjourned meeting of the directors today. All the other officers whose terms had expired were re-elected. A resolution was adopted recommending that policy holders be given the right to vote for directors, and a committee including Messrs. Alexander and Hyde, was appointed to carry out this step, which practically is the policy of mutualization advocated by President Alexander. The results outlined were reached after a protracted and at times heated session. Friends of Vice-President Hyde were disposed to view the outcome as a victory for their side, but in other quarters the result was regarded as a general compromise, in which the contending factions met half way. "We have settled all differences and healed all wounds," said Mr. Hyde, after the meeting. "Every one of us, from my superior, Mr. Alexander, down to the humblest subordinate, mow is pulling together. We are in complete accord."

A dissolution of parliament had no terrors for him, Mr. Chamberlain, the former colonial secretary, had a full house when he rose to address the House of Commons in the afternoon. A dissolution content to trust his political fortunes to the workingmen, who for 30 years had placed their confidence in him so generously. In his opinion, the sooner a dissolution came the better. He hopde, however, that the government would not abandon its trust simply because the opposition wanted office.

real object of the foolish and in-judged amendment was to creat dissension on the ministerial side. He never said free trade ought to be abandoned, but that the policy of free imports ought to be re-formed as it stood in the way of free trade. There was no difference between the premier and himself regarding the need of reform of the present policy, and their only differences were in regard to holding a colonial conference—differences of methods, not of principle.

Ridicules Opposition. Continuing, Mr. Chamberlain ridicu ed the opposition's contention that it was necessary to settle the question be cause of the effect of the fiscal agitatious on trade, pointing out that the whole foundation of the free trade argument was that trade was never better. A vote was that trade was never better. A vote of the house, or even of the country, against his (Mr. Chamberlain's) fiscal policy would not settle the question. He had never supposed it would secure immediate acceptance, but defeat would not prevent him from continuing to advocate what he believed to be right. He had already on his side the great majority of the great party, and the necessary recruits would be obtained from the present reactionaries.

Mr. Chamberlain concluded with an expression of his belief that a colonial conference would be held, and that the colonies would have a great deal to offer. He did not pretend that Great Britain should make concessions without reci-procal treatment, and did not believe that the British would reject the offers of their own kinsmen nor lose a great opportunity which might never reoccur.

ST. To Call Zemsky Sobor. According to a high authority, a decision practically had been taken officially to proclaim the Zemsky Sobor on February 22. M. Souvarin, the editor of the Novoe Vremya, said to the Associated Press last night:

"I do not believe this crime can now interfere with the carrying out of re form, to which the government is too far committed. I am certain the Zemsky far committed. I am certain the Zemsky Sobor will soon be announced without awaiting the termination of the war."

Prince Shirinsky Fchahmatoff, who had an audience of Emperor Nicholas at Tsarskoe Selo yesterday, was frankly told by the Emperor that the Zemsky Sobor would be elected under a class franchise by the nobles, clergy, merchants and peasants, but that all the deputies would sit together and was charged by the Emperor with the appointment of a committee to work up pointment of a committee to work up the details of the electoral machinery.

Shock to Emperor. The news of the death of Prince Sergius was brought to the Emperor while he was giving an audience to General Grippenberg, and caused him a great shock. By the Emperor's direction, the members of the imperial family, who were at Tsarskoe Selo in connection with the visit of Prince Frederick Leopold of Prussia, were immediately summoned to the chapel, where a requiem was held. A state requiem, in which members of the diplomatic corps will be present, is announced for today. The funeral arrangements have not yet been made: but in accordance with tradition.
