Spurgeon's Sermon-Congratulatory.

LONDON, June 18.—A jubilee in honor of the fiftieth birthday of Rev. Charles H. Spurgeon was given this evening. Over 5000 persons were present.

From the London Telegraph, June 18.

In consequence of the delay which has occurred in the receipt of documentary information from abroad—the defendant in the action being in India—it has been arranged by Messrs. Bolton & Mote, Gray's Inn square, the solicitors for Miss Finney (Miss Fortescue), with Messrs. Gregory, Rowell & Co., Bedford row, the defendants' solicitors, that the case in which she claims £30,000 damages for Lord Garmyley for breach of promise of marriage shall be entered in the list of causes for hearing during the Trinity sitting, and it is thought probable that it will be resolved this month. Because of this arrangement the case was rucked out of the cause list of the Easter sitting, and it is transferred to that for Trinity sitting. His absence from the former gave rise to the belief that the parties had privately compromised. Such is not the case. Miss Finney is still desirous of securing an early opportunity of explaining the circumstances attending her engagement with the defendant. For the plaintiff, as already mentioned, Mr. C. Russell, Q. C., with Mr. H. Wines, has been retained; and the defendant will be represented by the attorney-general, the Hon. Bernard Coleridge and Mr. K. S. Wright.

The Earl of Dunfermline.

Born fifty-eight years ago, Lord Dufferin succeeded while a boy to the barony of Dufferin and Cladaboy, a well-managed estate in the most prosperous of Irish counties, and the leadership of the liberal party of his neighborhood. But more than title, or estate, or the title of political conflict, were the care and companionship of a beautiful and accomplished mother. A granddaughter of Richard Binsley Sheridan, she inherited much of the wholeheartedness of her ancestor, with a delicacy and refinement all her own. Her sweet songs lived in the bright cycle of Irish poetry. To those who have leisure to turn to that charming volume, "Letters from High Lathedis, she will live again in the tender homage she has bestowed in her quod, almost before she had attained her manhood, a seat in the house of lords he no opportunity of trying the more stormy atmosphere of the house of commons. The discipline of Ulster politics, however, stood him in good stead. In no part of the British realm was party feeling stronger than in the northern province of Ireland. A protestant, a land-owner, and an adherent of the liberal party, he was one of a small minority among the population, one of a minute coterie among people of his own rank and station. A generous spirit drew him into political affairs, and he was to take any part in them he must, in the then condition of Ulster, be ever in the van, his flag unfurled aloft, quick in assault, vigilant in fence. However fiercely the political passion ran in this part of Ireland, manliness and intellectual force were always honored, to whatever party they belonged, and Ulstermen on all sides were proud of Lord Dufferin long before his name became known in wider fields.—J. L. Whittle in the Manhattan for July.

Clever Mrs. Book.

ST. CHARLES, June 18.—A Mr. Polke, representing himself to be an agent of the Eureka hay fork company, has been playing some sharp games upon various ones in the county. Mr. Book, near Grimsby, was persuaded by him to act as agent and was to allow said gentleman one rake for selling fifteen. Mr. Book gave his note for $300, which he was to receive when he had sold the rakes and delivered the money. Soon agent No. 2 arrives, and forms Book that the articles have arrived and demands payment of note. The usual performance in such cases being acted out, and Mr. Book was in a fair way to have a law affair, when Mrs. Book proved equal to the emergency by suddenly snatching said note, evidently believing that the transaction was nine points of the law, and quickly tearing it to pieces.

The New Canadian Loan.

MONTREAL, June 18.—It was announced on the stock exchange here this afternoon that the Canadian loan of five million pounds sterling had been successfully placed in London.

"Why do girls wear white dresses at parties?" says an exchange. "We don't know unless it is to attract the boys away from the pies."

OUR OLDEST TRADESMAN.

Fifty-eight Years in Toronto—The Changes in That Time.

Ismael Iredale, who lives at No. 1, Balmsto street, called into the World yesterday and claimed to be the oldest freeman and tradesman now living in Toronto. He was born in 1807 in York-shire, Eng., and came to this country in 1828, since which time he has been a citizen of the city. He joined the fire brigade in 1829 and remained a member of it for 30 years. His father bought the southwest corner of Queen and Bay streets, where Blyth's hotel stands, and the family trade also embraced that of painting and glazing. Mr. Iredale says that he painted and glazed the old Upper Canada college, as well as the Alliance in Miss Park, which is 76, but is somewhat deaf and weak-sighted. He is going to take part in the anti-slavery meeting.
