ing the day elsewhere, guarded by a posse of constables. Just before the court was declared adjourned for the day, Mr. Osler notified the counsel for defence that in addition to one more medical expert, whose testimony he intended to submit, only one or two witnesses would be called by the Crown, and these only as a matter of form, and that it would be wise for the defence to be prepared to proceed with their testimony soon after the opening of the court this morning.

The Bean e Was Kindiy. A pleasing feature of yesterday's sessions was the utter absence of any appeals by the defence to His Lordship to rule upon the admissibility or otherwise of evidence tendered by the Crown. Once Mr. Johnston objected to Mr. Osler's hypothetical questions to one of the medical experts, but His Lordship answered that Mr. Osler was pattern within his rights.

quite within his rights. Yesterday's Evidence Boiled Down.
Since the opening of the trial, probably no previous day has been so debably no previous day has been so devoid of interest to the gallery spectator. The testimony of medical experts, when clothed in professional and scientific terms, has little attraction and less meaning to the unimitiated. With the aid of His Lordship and the counsel, the jury were enabled to compresel, the jury were enabled to compresel, the jury were enabled to compresel, the first part of the corporation of the country of the corporation of the country of the corporation of the co

On the r hand, the defence, relying mainly in the description of the injuries the description of the injuries the description of the strong trial tri more positive and more strong-ly fortified in their opinions. On the other hand, the defence, relying mainly upon the description of the injuries to and the share upon the description of the injuries to and the shape of the head, as told by Dr. Edmund E. King, will endeavor to prove that all the conditions shown in the skull are possible results of the heavy blow laterally applied to the right perietal eminence. The point in Dr. King's descriptive evidence to which such frequent reference is made is that the head was compressed into a cone shape, with the apex at the brow. Undertaker Humphrey and his assistshape, with the apex at the brow.

Undertaker Humphrey and his assistant assert that the apex was at the vertex or top of the head. It will be remembered that Dr. King's examination of the skull was very superficial and made in a dark cellar, while that of the undertaker's was most minute and carefully made with every reason. and carefully made, with every reason for remarking the peculiar shape of the head. Moreover, the present condition of the skull shows Dr. King's examination and subsequent description to be entirely inaccurate, as the portions of the frontal bone are intact, a condition impossible when the head has been impossible when the head has been pressed into the shape as described by the family physician of the twins.

As stated above, defence and Crown agree as to the larger fractures in the skull being traceable to the lateral class purity, being bright, clear and the company of th agree as to the larger fractures in the skull being traceable to the lateral blow as their cause, but eliminating, as the defence do, the felling blow from in front, which the Crown allege. the only explanation given by them of the fracture of the right internal angular process, is the transmission force on the principal of vibration. Dr Caven Cross-Examined The cross-examination of Dr. Caven was taken up by Mr. Johnston yesterday morning. The only point in which medical testimony is the cause of the medical testimony is the cause the absence of a small portion of bone from the right internal angular process and the fracture of the molar bone and superior maxilla. This the Crown claim could have been caused only from a blow delivered from be-fore. The theory of the defence is that weight on the frontal bone and right perietal eminence. Mr. Johns on's cross-examination was altogether for the purpose of gaining such admissions theory into harmony with that of the defence. Dr. Caven said he thought it was within the possibilities that the erfor maxilla were perfor maxilla were due to the crushing blow, but these, taken with the fracture of the internal process, indicated to him that a second line of force had been applied. The defence theory, the doctor said, was capable of reasonable argument, but personally he could not agree with it. During the cross-examination the witness said the skull vas broken into about forty pieces A lengthy cross-examination by both Mr. Johnston and Mr. Lount failed to move Dr. Caven from the position taken by him as to the two lines of ferces necessary for the production of the existing fractures.

Dr. Arthur Jukes Johnson, who was associated with Dr. Caven in the post-mortem, followed. There were no injuries below the condyles at the base of the skull. The point of greatist impact, was the pight replaced more than the point of greatists. est impact was the right perietal eminence with the left side of the head resting sufficiently to bring the left zygomatic arch into violent contact with the surface upon which the head lay. The prosecution in the Hyams murder trial is practically closed, and before to-day's sessions of the court are ended, the defence will be well under way. The question of holding court to-day was, with the consent of the coursel on both sides, submitted to the jurymen, who decided that they would be as comfortable in the jury would be as comfortable in the jury would be as comfortable in the jury and the literature of the court are ended, the defence will be well under way. The question of holding court to-day was, with the consent of the condition of the right perietal eminence, while the left side was resting on a resisting surface. With the evidence he heard Understance was evidence of another line of force from the front. Dr.McFarlane agreed with the medical men who preceded him, that the consent of the condition of the right perietal eminence, while the left side was resting on a resisting surface. The opinion of Other Surgeons

Dr. McKenzie also thought the great majority of the fractures to the skull could be best accounted for by a force broadly diffused on the right side of the head. There were also very manifest indications of the second line of force spoken of by the other witnesses, without any reference to evidence given by the undertaker or his agriculture. without any reference to evidence given by the undertaker or his assistant. In 'examination the witness said he would not undertake to apply any rules to the fractures in a skull as badly broken up as the one in question.

Dr. J. M. Cotton, Lambton Mills, agreed with the preceding witnesses as to the necessity of two lines of force. Mr. Johnston 'endeavored, to entrap this witness into a contradiction of the testimony given by him at the last trial, but was well met, and the scheme failed of its 'purpose.

A Proposition to Give the Consumer Ten-Cent Reduction and Help Themselves to Legislation of Their Own Peculiar Kind Failed to Satisfy the Municipal Fathers-Full Text of the Magnates' Letter to Ald. Lamb's Committee and Its Very Prompt Rejections

The special committee of the City, Council, consisting of Ald. Lamb, Dunn, Scott and McMurrich, yesterday, afternoon considered a communication from the Consumers' Gas Co. in reference to the reduction in the price of gas. In the company's letter of Nov. 11, the committee were assured that the company had only the welfare of the citizens at heart, and would not in any way do the public the slightest injustice. The committee was also invited to visit the works and see for themselves whether there was any possibility of a reduction being made. Here is the letter received yesterday:

ternative, namely, whether it is possible to do away with any charge on the ferred from school to the university. And still Sandy was never in the rear of his class. Then his father took him, as he thought his education was such that he would make a business man, and 'prentited him to a wholesale grocer at Edinburgh. Carlyle then goes on in his letter to compare precocity to a mushroom that comes up in a night and dries in a day. Or like to a butterfly roving from flower to flower, and then disappears; unlike the sturdy oak of the forest, which has stood the hurricanes and frosts of many winters, with its limbs branching out and its roots taking strong hold of earth, receiving its vitality therefrom, thus preparing for the future.

Years had passed. Sandy McPherson had gone into the grocery business for himself, and Thomas Carlyle was chosen Lord Provsot of the University of Edinburgh. In his integral and groce into the profess the company to establish and maintain this fund, and the process which has not maintain this fund, and the process which has shown to be the consumers in the process where the company to establish and maintain this fund, and the process which has shown to be too away with any charge on the company's earnings whereby the company's earnings whereby the company's earnings whereby the company, searnings whereby the company's earnings whereby the company, searnings whereby the company's earnings whereby the company, searnings whereby the company, searnings whereby the company, being relieved from obligation to collect the amount of such charge from the consumers in the way of a reduction in the price of gas, the company would say that the only possible solution of the problem depends on whether or not the company can, in justice to the provisions contained in the act of 1887, which authorize the company, and now—according to the recent interpretation placed upon that act—makes it incumbent upon the company to add a large sum each year to the Plant and Buildings Renewal Fund, which sum company to establish and maintain this fund, and strued, requires the company to es-tablish and maintain this fund, and the event of great disasters, losses or other unforeseen causes, not prove adequate; but perhaps this risk could be gotten over by the company being free to invest its funds in any manner the company may deem advisable, whether in interest bearing securities, the company's works or otherwise. In this way, it would always have a ready means, when urgently needed, of restoring, renovating or extending the works at any time, without that delay which might prove most inconvenient and injurious to the public interest; and, as according to the recent construction put upon the company's act, the premiums on the company's construction put upon the company's act, the premiums on stock are required to be invested in comparatively unproductive securities, it will be necessary, if the company cease to make the annual 5 per cent. additions to the Plant and Buildings Renewal Fund, that this provision be abrogated in respect of the premiums or the in respect of the premiu sued as well as on the unissued capi-

"It would also seem proper that any further friction might be avoided by the act providing to what account should be charged any amounts written off from time to time for losses, depreciation, abandonment of old for depreciation, abandonment of old for new plant, wear and tear, etc.

themselves in connection with the pro-posed legislation to relieve the consumers of the present obligation to contribute in the price they pay for gas a sum sufficient to maintain the Plant and Buildings Renewal Fund, but the foregoing will indicate, the company trust, a willingness on their part to meet the wishes of your committee, if permitted by law to do so. "In the event of such permission be-ing secured by legislation, the company will so rearrange their gas rates that the consumers will get the benefit of the legislation on the following basis:
