RIAGE WITH HIS ROYAL HIGHNESS PRINCE ALBERT OF SAXE COBURG AND GOTHA.*

This most important and national event took place on the 10th Feb., at noon, at the Chapel Royal, St. James's; and since the marriage of her Royal Highness the late Princess Charlotte of Wales, there has been no occurrence connected with the Royal Family of England which excited so great an interest. It was known throughout the metropolis in the course of the last week that the celebration of the marriage would take place at noon, instead of an advanced hour of the evening, as was heretofore the custom with respect to Royal marriages. The knowledge of this fact brought many, many thousands from all sides of London into the Park at an early hour. Never did St. James's Park present such an extraordinary display-never was such an immense multitude assembled there since the rejoicings at the visit of the allied Sovereigns in 1814. As early as-nine o'clock considerable numbers had arrived in order to secure a good place from which to see the Royal cortège pass from Buckingham Palace to St. James's. By that hour the vicinity of Buckingham Palace, and all the avenues leading to both palaces were thronged. As the day wore on to noon, the assemblage between the back of Carltonterrace and the foot of Constitution-hill had increased to a dense mass of very many thousands, through which it was difficult to keep open the carriage-way for that portion of the company who had the privilege of the entrée. The very lowering aspect of the weather seemed to have had no terrors for the visitors, male and female, young and old, who continued to arrive in masses, by which the space already described became, before 11 o'clock, thronged to a most distressing pressure. Nor was this pressure diminished to any important extent by the smart showers which came down at intervals. As each successive group of visitors arrived they of course thickened the broad line of crowd at each side of the carriage-way between the two palaces. Those whose stations were in the rear of this line soon got an opportunity of overlooking those in front by hiring standing room on some one of the many hundred chairs, tables, or benches, which were let out at various prices, from 1s. 6d. to 5s. each person. Many who could not afford or would not pay for such a luxury, succeeded in getting on the branches of the trees as well out of as in the line of the expected procession. The numbers who sought these commanding positions were so great in some of the trees that the branches gave way, and the parties came, not immediately to the ground, but on the heads and shoulders of the dense masses beneath them. We did not hear, however, that any persons were sericusly hurt by those accidents. Many of them excited roars of laughter, from the efforts of those who had resorted to them to keep their positions on the falling branches, or to secure more firm positions on the boughs above them. In the course of the morning the crowds in that part of the Park situate between the back of Carlton-terrace and Marlborough House were much amused by a marrow-bone and cleaver concert, got up in honour of the Royal nuptials, and we must do justice to those engaged by saying, that the effect of this rude music was by no means disagreeable. Soon after the firing of the guns, announcing the most important part of the ceremonial, the placing the ring on her Majesty's finger, the whole mass of the visitors who had not obtained fixed stands rushed almost simultaneously towards Buckingham Palace, in order to have a view of her Majesty and the Prince on their return. The pressure here became so great that it required the united and incessant efforts of the police and the Horse Guards Blue to keep the carriage way open. This necessary but disagreeable part of their duty was performed with much good temper, and in general was received with much good humour even by those who appeared to suffer a little from it. The police regulations in this part of the Park, and indeed in every part that we had an opportunity of observing, were admirably well arranged by the Commissioners Rowan and Mayne, and their directions were carried out by the force-officers and men under their command with great judgment and good temper. They had in some parts of the line an arduous and difficult

BUCKINGHAM PALACE (INTERIOR).

To witness the preliminary step in the grand ceremonial of the day, the departure of her Majesty from Buckingham Palace to St. James's, several hundreds of persons were admitted to the grand hall and portions of the grand staircase by tickets from the Board of Green Cloth. About ten o'clock elegantly-dressed ladies and gentlemen, many of whom were in full dress, with favours and white flowers, began to arrive at the grand hall entrance, ranging themselves on the ends and sides of the grand hall, where they had excellent positions for seeing the two illustrious individuals whose marriage was about to take place.

The officers of the household and the attendants of her Ma-The officers of the household and the attendants of her Majesty began to arrive at Buckingham Palace about half-past ten o'clock. The Earl of Uxbridge, the Earl of Belfast, the Earl of Surrey, the Earl of Albermarle, Colonel Cavendish, Lord Alfred Paget, Sir George Anson, the Lord in Waiting, Ladies in Waiting, Maids of Honour, Bedchamber Women, Gentlemen Ushers, &c., were all assembled at eleven o'clock. After remaining in attendance on her Majesty for a short time the Ladies of her Majesty's suite were sammoned by the Master of the Horse, and handed into four of the Royal carriages by Colonel Cavendish (Clerk Marshal) and Lord Alfred Paget, and dispatched to St. James's Palace, there to await the arrival of the Queen.

At half-past eleven the six gentlemen composing the foreign suites of his Royal Highness Prince Albert and the Duke of Saxe Coburg Gotha mustered in the Grand Hall. They appeared in dark blue or green uniforms, and three of them took their departure in a Royal Carriage for St. James's, accompanied by two gentlemen Ushers of the Queen's household, to be in readiness to receive Prince Albert.

At a quarter to twelve the Royal carriages having returned, notice was given to the Royal bridegroom that all was in readiness for his departure. The Prince immediately quitted the private apartments of the Palace, and passed through the state rooms, into which a very few spectators were admitted. His Royal Highness was dressed in the uniform of a British Field Marshal, wore no other decoration than the insignia of the Order of the Garter—viz., the collar, with the George appended, set in precious stones, the star of the order set in diamonds, and the Garter itself, embroidered in diamonds, round his knee. The Prince was supported on one side by his father, the Duke of Saxe Coburg Gotha, and his brother, the Hereditary Prince. The Duke was dressed in a dark blue uniform, turned up with red, with military boots, similar to those worn by the Life Guards. His Serene Highness wore the collar of the Order of the Garter, and the star, and the star of the Order of Coburg Gotha. Prince Ernest wore a light blue cavalry purifyers, with either appoints. Ernest wore a light blue cavalry uniform, with silver appointments, carrying a light helmet in his hand. His Serene Highness wore the insignia of a Grand Cross of an Order of Knighthood.—His Royal Highness Prince Albert was preceded by the Lord Chamberlain, the Vice Chamberlain, the Treasurer and Controller of the Household, Lord Torrington (who wore the insignia of a Grand Cross of the order of Coburg Gotha, with which he has heen lately invested), the Clerk Marshal, Equerries, Gentlemen Ushers, &c., the remaining portion of the foreign suite bringing up the rear. The word "sharp" (which is at Court the usual intimation that members of the Royal Family are at hand) was now

CELEBRATION OF HER MAJESTY'S MAR- carriages. A squadron of Life Guards escorted the Prince to St. James's Palace. On the return of the Lord Chamberlain six of the Royal carriages were assembled, and his lordship informed her Majesty that all was ready. The Queen then left her apartments, leaning on the arm of the Earl of Uxbridge as Lord Chamberlain, supported by the Duchess of Kent, and followed by a Page of Honour. Her Majesty was preceded by the Earl of Belfast, the Earl of Surrey, Lord Torrington, the Earl of Albermarle, Colonel Cavendish, Sir George Anson, Lord Alfred Paget, Mr. Byng, and several other officers of the household. Her Majesty carried her train over her arm. The Royal bride was greeted with oud acclamations on descending to the Grand Hall, but her eye was bent principally on the ground, and a hurried glance around, and a slight inclination of the head was all the acknowledgement returned. Her Majesty were no diamonds on her head, nothing but a simple wreath of orange blossoms. The magnificent veil did not cover her face, but hung down on each shoulder. A pair of very large diamond earrings, a diamond necklace, and the insignia the Order of the Garter, were the principal ornaments worn v the Queen.

The Duchess of Kent and the Duchess of Sutherland rode in the same carriage with her Majesty, and the Royal cortège left the Palace for St. James's Palace at a slow pace under a strong escort of the Household Cavalry.

BUCKINGHAM PALACE (EXTERIOR).

The court in front of the Palace was occupied by the Baud of the regiment of Blues, and one or two companies of the Grena-dier Guards, and the whole of the line thence to the garden enrance to St. James's Palace was lined with Horse Guards and trong corps of the police. The mmediate road for the procession was kept clear with great difficulty, so numerous were the atempts from the pressure without to break in on the line and secure position where a sight of the Royal pair might be better had. Anxiously did the assembled mutitude look for some signal of her Majesty's departure from Buckirgham Palace, and as carriage af-Majesty's departure from Buckingham Palace, and as carriage after carriage rolled down the Mal, carrying some of the honourced spectators to the chapel, the more impatient they became for the passing of the procession. Twelve o'clock at length arrived, and his Royal Highness Prince Albart, attended by a small escort of Horse Guards, and accompanied by his father, the Duke of Saxe Cobourg and Gotha, and his bother, Prince Ernest, then left he Palace and proceeded to St. James's; but from the windows of the carriages being closed the Royal party were only recognised, and passed along with but slight applause. At a quarter-past twelve, however, the band in front of the Palace struck up the national air of "God save the Queen," and by the tremendous shouts which resounded through the Park, it was proclaimed that her Majesty had entered her carriage and was then proceeding to St. James's to plight her troth to his Royal Highness Prince Albert of Saxe Coburg and Gotha. As her Majesty pased down the line she was most eithusiastically cheered, and appeared highly gratified by the loydry which her subjects expressed, one or two ludicrous incidents amongst the crowd also exciting her smile: but her countenance was extremely pale, and appeared to betoken considerable anxiety. The cortige of her Majesty was attended by a full guard of honour, but the carriages were drawn y only two horses each, and without the rich caparisons which usually wear on state occasions. THE THRONE ROOM.
On the arrival of the Queen at St. James's Palace her Majesty was conducted to her closet, immediately behind the Throne-coon, where she remained attended by the Maids of Honour and Trainbearers until the summons was received from the Lord Chamberlain conveying the intimation that everything was duly prepared for the Sovereign's moving towards the Chapel.

THE CHAPEL. The principal entrances to the Chapel Royal were from the Ambassadors -court, and the colourquadrangle opposite St. James's street. The interior is oblong, standing east and west about 62 feet in length, and 25 in breadth. At the upper or eastern end, feet in length, and 25 in breadth. At the upper or eastern end, is the communion table, and at the lower end, abutting over the main entrance, is the Royal gallery or closet. Two galleries supported by cast-iron pillars stretched east and west the entire length of the chapel. On the floor, placed longitudinally, were two pews on each side of the chapel, set apart for the chief nobility, and those who took part in the procession. Below the choir, on the right, and in the galleries opposite, usually appropriated as Royal closets, the walls of the building were thrown out, and six benches on each side fitted up for the accommodation of peers, peeresses, and other distinguished spectators. The Royal closet was assigned to the ambassadors and their ladies, five rows of seats, elevated one above the other, having been erected for their accommodation. The whole of the seats in the chapel were stuffed, covered with crimson cloth, and elegantly namented with gold fringe. On the communion table was dis played a vast quantity of golden plate, including six salvers, one of gigantic dimensions, two ponderous and rich vases, four flagons, four communion cups, and two lofty and magnificent candelabra. The cornice above the altar, of beautifully carved oak, was richly gilt, superb crimson velvet drapery depending from it in graceful folds upon the communion table. Within the railing, ich was also covered with crimson velvat, stools were placed or the right of the altar for the Archbishops of Canterbury and York, and on the left for the Bishop of London, Dean of the Chapel Royal. In front of the communion table were placed four chairs of state, gilt, and covered with crimson silk velvet, each of different construction, and varying in elevation, according to the dignity of their intended occupants. The highest, largest in size, and most costly in workmanship, was of course appropriated to her Majesty, and was placed somewhat to the highest fifth the centre; that on the opposite side, immediately on her Majesty's right hand, because the side, in the contract of the contract that the contract of the contract the side. ng set apart for his Royal Highness Prince Albert. Before these hairs, which were placed about six feet sutside the rail, footstools were set of corresponding structure and lecoration. There were also footstools for her Majesty and Prince Albert, on which to kneel at the altar. On her Majesty's left a chair was placed for the Duchess of Kent; and at the opposite side, on Prince Albert's right, one for the Queen Dowager. On her Majesty's extreme left were seats for their Royal Highnesses the Dukes of Sussex and Cambridge, and on Prince Albert's extreme right, for his Serene Highness the reigning Duke of Saxe Coburg, the hereditary Duke, and their Royal Highnesses the Duchess of Cambridge, Prince George of Cambridge, Princess Augusta and Princess Mary of Cambridge. The floor of the chapel was covered with rich purple and gold carpeting, the prominent figure being the Norman rose. The tout ensemble, both as concerns the extension, decoration, and entire arrangements of the interior, mpletely harmonised with the original design and structure of the chapel; simplicity and elegance, not show or gaudiness, being the uniform characteristic. The ceiling is composed of antique fretwork compartments varying in size and figure, on the panelling of which are emblazoned the quarterings and heraldic distinctions of the different members of the Royal Family, from the time of its erection to that of his late Majesty William IV. and Queen heard on the grand staircase, and on descending which the fa-voured few occupying the Grand Hall behind the Yeomen Guard received the Prince with a loud clapping of hands, which his Royal Highness acknowledged in the most gracious manner. A flourish of trumpets and drums at twenty-five minutes past twelve o'clock, gave intimation that the procession of the Royal pridegroom had commenced its movement, and shortly after, having passed through the various rooms to which we have alluded, it entered the colonade in the following order:— THE PROCESSION OF THE BRIDEGROGM.

Earl of Uxbridge. Earl of Belfast.

THE BRIDEGROOM,
HIS ROYAL HIGHNESS FIELD MARSHAL PRINCE ALBERT, K. G., Wearing the Collar of the Order of the Garter.

Each attended by officers of their suite, namely, Count Kolowrath, Baron Alvensleben, and Baron de

As the Prince moved along he was greeted with loud clapping of hands from the gentlemen, and enthusiastic waving of handker-chiefs from the assembled ladies. He wore the uniform of a Field Marshal in the British army. Over his shoulders was hung the Collar of the Garter surmounted by two white rosettes. His appearance was attractive and much improved since his arrival on Saturday; and with his pale and pensive looks he won golden opi-nions from the fair coterie near which we were sitting. His father and his brother were also welcomed with the utmost cordiality. Both seemed pleased with their reception, and the Hereditary Prince, who has more of determination but less of good natured complaisance in his countenance than his brother, testified his sense of it by repeatedly bowing his thanks to the fair ladies at his side.

On reaching the Chapel Royal the drums and trumpets filed off without the doors, and, the procession advancing, his Royal Highness was conducted to the seat provided for him on the left of the altar. His Royal Highness walked up the aisle, carrying what appeared to be a cadeau or a book in his right hand, and repeatedly wed to the peers in the body of the chapel. His form, dress and meanour, were much admired. It might well be said of him, in the language of Scott, Having reached the haut pas, his Royal Highness affectionately kissed the hand of the Queen Dowager, and then bowed to the Archbishops and Dean. Immediately on his entrance a voluntary was performed by Sir George Smart on the organ. The Master of the Ceremonies and the officers of the Bridegroom stood near the person of his Royal Highness. The Lord Chamberlain and Vice Chamberlain, preceded by the drums and trumpets, then re-turned to wait upon her Majesty.

Meanwhile, his Royal Highness entered into close conversation with the Queen Dowager, until the trumpets and drums announced the moving of the Queen's procession.

After having conducted the Royal Prince to the altar, the Lord Steward and the Lord Chamberlain quitted the Royal Bridegroon for the purpose of conducting the Queen to the altar. In a few minutes, that which was denominated the Queen's procession was announced by a flourish of trumpets and drums as having been put in motion. The procession passed through the colonnade up to the chapel doors in the subjoined order : THE QUEEN'S PROCESSION.

As her Majesty approached the chapel, the National Anthem was performed by the instrumental band. Her Majesty walked up the aisle followed by her trainbearers and attendants, without up the aisle followed by her trainbearers and attendants, without noticing or bowing to any of the peers. On reaching the haut pas her Majesty knelt on her footstool, and having performed her private devotions, sat down in her chair of state. The different officers of State having now taken their seats in the body of the chapel, the coup d'œil was splendid beyond description. The altar and the haut pas were in themselves perfect pictures; and the interesting accession on which this may throug were called together and the haut pas were in themselves perfect pictures; and the interesting occasion on which this gay throng was called together could not fail to throw around the whole a charm of the most irresistible nature. On the right hand side of the altar were her Majesty, her Royal Highness the Duchess of Kent, and their Royal Highnesses the Dukes of Cambridge and Sussex, and Lord Melbourne, the Lord Chancellor, and other great officers of state. In the aisle of the chapel stood the pursuivants, heralds, pages, and other attendants, decorated with the wedding favours; and at the door-way and along the passages were stationed the soldiers, gentlemen at arms, &c. With such gorgeous materials, it is not wonderful that a picture With such gorgeous materials, it is not wonderful that a picture rich in harmony of colouring and grouping was produced. It was indeed a beautiful scene, such as few will witness again, and the effect was much heightened by the sunbeams, which had only partially shone through the Gothic window, widening into an expanse of sunshine as her Majesty proceeded up the aisle. Her Majesty and Prince Albert having taken their stations at the altar, the Archbishop of Canterbury commenced the service, the Bishop of London making the responses

The Rubric was rigidly adhered to throughout.

The Archbishop of Canterbury read the service with great appriateness and much feeling, the Bishop of London repeating the

When his Grace came to the words-"Albert, wilt thou have this woman to be thy wedded wife, to live together after God's ordinance in the holy estate of matrimony? Wilt thou love her, comfort her, honour, and keep her in sick ness and in health; and, forsaking all other, keep thee only unto so long as ye both shall live?"

His Royal Highness in a firm tone, replied "I will."

And when he said—"Victoria, wilt thou have Albert to thy edded husband, to live together after God's ordinance in th holy estate of matrimony? Wilt thou obey him, and serve him love, honour, and keep him in sickness and in health; and, for-saking all other, keep thee only unto him, so long as ye both shall live?" Her Majesty, in accents which, though full of softness and music, were audible at the most extreme corner of the chapel, replied "I will;" and on so doing accompanied the expression with a glance at his Royal Highness, which convinced all who beheld it that the heart was with her words.

The Archbishop of Canterbury then said, "Who giveth this man to be married to this man?

His Royal Highness the Duke of Sussex, who occupied a seat on the left of her Majesty, now advanced, and, taking her Majesty's hand, said, "Ido." The Archbishop of Canterbury then laid hold of her Majesty's hand, and pressing it in that of Prince Albert's, pronounced these words, his Royal Highness repeating

"I, Albert, take thee, Victoria, to be my wedded wife, to have and to hold, from this day forward, for better for worse, for richer for poorer, in sickness and in health, to love and to cherish, till death do us part, according to God's holy ordinance; and ereto I plight thee my troth."

Her Majesty repeated the words mutatis mutandis, "I, Vicria take thee Albert to my wedded husband, to have and to hold, om this day forward, for better for worse, for richer, for poorer sickness and in health, to love, cherish, and to obey, till death us do part, according to God's holy ordinance; and thereto I give thee my troth." This was all gone through in a tone of voice and with a clearness of expression which we have seldom witnessed on similar occasions in much humbler walks of life. Her Majesty's expres-sion of the words, "love, cherish, and obey," and the confiding ook with which they were accompanied, were inimitably chaste The Archbishop of Canterbury then took the ring, a plain gold ing, from his Royal Highness, and placing it to the fourth finger of her Majesty, returned it to his Royal Highness.

Prince Alert put it on, repeating after his Grace these words-"With this ring I thee wed, with my body I thee worship, and with all my worldly goods I thee endow; in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Hely Ghost. Amen."

The Archbishop then concluded the service as follows, her Majesty and Prince Albert still remaining standing at the altar:-O Eternal God, Creator and Preserver of all mankind, Given of all spiritual grace, the Author of everlasting life, send thy blessing upon these thy servants, Victoria and Albert, whom we bless in thy name; that, as Isaac and Rebecca lived faithfully to gether, so these persons may surely perform and keep the vow and covenant betwixt them made (whereof this ring given and received is a token and pledge), and may ever remain in perfect love and peace together, and live according to thy laws, through Jesus Chairt T. J.

"Those whom God hath joined together let no man put

The Park and Tower guns then fired a Royal salute.

The Arrhbishop of Canterbury then proceeded:—
"Forasmuch as Albert and Victoria have consented together in holy wedlock, and have witnessed the same before God and this noty wedtock, and have either and pledged their troth either to other, and have declared the same by giving and receiving of a ring, and by joining of hands, I pronounce that they be man and wife together in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost. Amen.

"God the Father, God the Son, and God the Holy Ghost, bless, preserve and keep you; the Lord mercifully with his favour look upon you; and so fill you with all spiritual benediction and grace, that ye may so live together in this life, that in the world to come ye may have life everlasting. Amen."

The choir then performed the Deus Misercatur (King's in B flat, the verse parts being doubled by the choir and sung by Messrs. Knyvett, Wylde, Neil, Vaughan, Sale, and Bradbury, on the decani side; and on the cantoris, by Evans, Salmon, Horncastle, Roberts, Welsh, and Clarke.

Sir George Smart presided at the organ.

It is but justice to the gentlemen of the Chapel Royal to state that this service was executed in the most effective and spirit-stirring mauner.

The remaining portions of the ceremony were then impressively read by the Archbishop of Canterbury, and the union having been concluded, the Royal procession left the chapel in the same form that it arrived, the only difference being, that Prince Albert's retinue went out first without him, and that he remained behind to escort her Majesty, hand-in-hand, and ungloved, out of the chapel, escorted and accompanied as she entered.

The several members of the Royal Family, on passing her Majesty, all poid their congratulations, and the Duke of Suggestion.
