him, the soils, atmosphere; manufacturing, means of transportation; direction, distance, maps; and so on naturally to world relations. The two things that catch the eye on picking up the book are the large number and the excellence of the illustrations, and the superior quality of the maps.

A SURVEY OF THE BRITISH EMPIRE and A BRIEF SURVEY OF BRITISH HISTORY. Two volumes. Pages 352 and 278. Cloth. Illustrated. Blackie & Son, London, 1904.

These two books present to the student and to the general reader who wishes to husband his time a general survey of the English-speaking world. The historical survey, occupying a large portion of the first named book and all of the second, is very judicious in its selection of important events; and in its broad treatment of these in narrative form, it apparently discriminates very wisely in the rejection of minor and less important details. The geography, resources and manufactures of the empire are presented in a clear topical way, illustrated abundantly by maps and photographs. The summaries at the end of each volume are unusually comprehensive, presenting an illuminating array of historical, biographical, geographical and other information.

Macaulay's WILLIAM PITT. With introduction and notes by R. F. Winch, M. A. Cloth. Pages 141. Price 2s. Macmillan & Company, London, 1904.

Those who have read the companion volumes to this, before mentioned in the REVIEW, on the lives of Goldsmith, Johnson, with other essays of Macaulay, will read with the same absorbing interest this literary gem.

INTRODUCTORY LATIN GRAMMAR AND FIRST LATIN READER. By E. W. Hagarty, B. A., Collegiate Institute, Toronto. Cloth. Pages 430. Price $1. G. N. Morang and Company, Toronto, 1904.

This is perhaps the best attempt that has yet been made in Canada to provide an adequate introduction to the study of Latin. Its initial stages are easy, designed to interest and stimulate the beginner, and lay a good foundation for future progress. It is intended to cover a complete course for university matriculation examinations. Part one is devoted to forms and easy continuous reading, in which it is pleasant to note some originality in presentation by means of pictures and references to what will interest young students. Part two contains easy reading matter suitable as an introduction to Cæsar, and part three has a short course in syntax.
