

Canada should play a leading role by setting an example of enduring commitment and by persuading other countries to do likewise. Our country has a major presence in African development. The Canadian people have demonstrated their own commitment and are clearly prepared to support strong action by their government. We recommend that the people and governments of Canada join in supporting a "Decade for Africa" and we suggest a number of practical steps to give substance to that commitment.