Parsons A.D.L. was formed by Ron Parsons, an industrial designer with great experience in designing consumer goods. We design and manufacture a line of products intended primarily to give independence to handicapped people.

Assistive devices have been developed for eating, cooking, grooming, dressing, reading and writing, and bathing. Many of our products are equally suited to making life easier for the general public. Hundreds of items are available.

The Parsons line is sold throughout Canada by a network of 400 health care dealers who service institutions and undertake retail sales. Our reputation has resulted in world-wide enquiries, and we are already exporting to the United States and Europe.

An aging population is increasing public awareness of our product line. Gradually, items formerly considered only applicable to invalids are being marketed to the general public. Parsons' in-house design and manufacturing ability means quick responses creating dealer and market confidence.

The unique, contemporary wall and bed quilts designed and made in Pat Cairns Studio bring individuality and distinction to any decor. As wall treatments, they are an exciting new alternative to paintings. Our quilts' outstanding colours and bold graphic designs are set within an ongoing textile tradition, bringing with it a warmth and softness unmatched in any other media.

Canada's Department of External Affairs has purchased Pat Cairns' work for presentation overseas. She was one of six Canadian quilt artists selected to receive a commission for a quilt to hang in the Folklife Pavilion at Vancouver's Expo '86. Ms. Cairns' quilts are also in many private collections.

A recent book, Putting It All Together: A Contemporary Approach to Quiltmaking by Pat Cairns and Jean Affleck (72 pp., colour cover, 4 colour pages) teaches the authors' methods used to create their exciting works.

Full colour 4 x 6 postcards of Pat Cairns' designs are also available.

Modern designs are featured in wall and bed quilts with an international reputation.
