

Two other groups of Poles will arrive later in the summer and begin programs related to Dairy/Beef Cattle Management and Herd Reproduction and Health Management. In total six provinces will participate in the training of the Polish farmers: British Columbia, Alberta, Manitoba, Ontario, Quebec and New Brunswick.

The program is run by Semex Canada, a co-operative of six breeding centres across Canada. In 1986 Semex established its practical "how-to-do" training in all facets of livestock production. The ILMS is headquartered at Kemptville, Ontario about 50 kilometres south of Ottawa, but ILMS programs are implemented across Canada.
