

PREFACE.

vii.

estimation. In brief the history of federation during this period is largely a record of parliamentary proceedings and leading editorials, which acted and reacted on one another in an effort to stimulate public sentiment to a realization of the advantage of a federal union of the Australias. To these two sources we must look, not only for the most of our material upon the movement, but also for its best interpretation.